Gritting Their Teeth . . .

Liberals in Oak Bay will take a second run next Tuesday night at selecting a candidate in next month's provincial election.

A nomination meeting Friday night produced an audience of about 40 — but no candidates.

Mrs. Lee Jameson, president of the party's association in the riding, said today that there are two potential candidates but both wanted the weekend to consult with family and business colleagues before letting their names stand.

One of the candidates is Michael O'Connor, a lawyer. Mrs. Jameson and other party members declined to identify the second possibility.

Another nomination meeting will be held Tuesday, at a location to be announced.

Meanwhile, Progressive Conservative supporters in the two-seat riding of Victoria will select their candidates from a choice of at least three at a meeting tonight.

Contenders are Peter Stanley, 28, a BA graduate working at the University of Victoria towards his bachelor of education degree; Lloyd Burdon, 24, an insurance and pension consultant, and Douglas Christie, a lawyer.

The nomination meeting will be at 8 p.m. in the Georgian Room of The Empress.

Progressive Conservatives in Esquimalt constituency will hold their nomination meeting Sunday.

CUPW Will Sort Christmas Cheques

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

Striking postal workers in Western Canada, and probably all across the country, have agreed to sort all federal government pension and benefit cheques so they can be delivered before Christmas, a union spokesman said today.

Victoria Canadian Union of Postal Workers president Stan Darlington said union members have agreed to sort the thousands of benefit cheques at some place other than the post office and they will be delivered to homes by letter carriers.

"We will do the sorting at some neutral place, not the post office so our members won't have to cross our own picket line," he said.

The union is willing to meet with Victoria postmaster Marvin Glover to work out a system for the sorting.

Darlington was unsure whether the same situation would prevail across the country but said it applies at least from Winnipeg west.

There was some dispute as to whether the cheques would be handled by members of the Letter Carriers Union of Canada if they had not been sorted by CUPW members.

A refusal to handle the cheques would have meant the government would revert to a contingency system which included a complicated and time-consuming system of distributing benefits through federal offices in each district.

The cheques include old age security, Canada Pension Plan, judges' pensions, MP pensions, RCMP pensions, armed forces pensions, public service superannuation, veterans allowances and family allowances.

CUPW, for the first time in its history, has established a national strike fund and the first payment to the 22,000 striking members will be made Friday.

Darlington said he did not know exactly how much the payments would be, but said they will be made weekly to all members who are carrying out the duties assigned to them during the strike.

National CUPW president Joe Davidson said the payments, apparently from a masssive loan from an undisclosed source, will be made until a settlement is negotiated.

At a membership meeting in Victoria earlier this week, Darlington said members voted to send a telegram to the union's national negotiating committee "indicating a course of action which might resolve the strike."

He would not indicate what the suggested action was.

A Slice Of the Pizza?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Insurance Corporation of British Columbia officials said Friday they are investigating a charge that a Burnaby ICBC adjuster suggested a donation of 10 pizzas would speed service to a pizza parlor owner.

Spokesman Jerry Beckerman said a preliminary check indicated the suggestion for the pizzas started as a joke "but the joke got out of hand."

Doug Price, owner of the pizza parlor which had a delivery car damaged in an accident Tuesday said the suggestion was not made in jest.

He said an employee was unsuccessful on Wednesday in getting the proper accident report forms filled out. He succeeded on Thursday but was told the appraisal would take some time.

Price said he phoned an adjuster and was told the appraisal would have to wait "at least to the end of the week."

"But he said there was a bright side of the problem," Price said. "He said there was a staff party and they could put my car through right away if the party were supplied with 10 pizzas."

No pizzas were sent but the car was appraised Thursday and was awaiting repairs in a body shop on Friday.

GREETINGS from a downcast Santa are portrayed on this larger-than-life protest Chrismas card stationed in front of the Davidson House of Cards on View, while shop owner Don Davidson adds his name. When the card is filled with names it will be shipped express to Prime Minister Trudeau with the Yule-tide message: We urge you to settle the current postal dispute, by legislation if necessary. The strike is now in its 26th day.

Voters Braving Weather

The early voting was heavy in Victoria, Saanich and Esquimalt today despite heavy showers and cold winds.

The early turnout was lighter in Oak Bay where only school board posts are being filled.

At St. Luke's Hall in Saanich more than 100 people had voted in the first hour and another 20 were waiting to mark their ballots.

The voting process was slow in Saanich because of the 10 ballots and some were taking as much as five minutes to study and mark their choices.

The foot-long ballot is about eight inches wide and 10 ballots thick. They fold neatly into the ballot boxes.

Major reason for the brisk turnout is believed to be the races for mayor in Saanich, Victoria and Esquimalt. In Oak Bay, Brian Smith was re-elected by acclamation.

The biggest line-up in Oak Bay may be at the Oak Bay Beach Hotel, rather than a polling booth.

The Liquor Administration Branch, in a surprise ruling, has said the Snug lounge can serve liquor today because there is no election for council, just school board, in the municipality.

Hotel officials made a routine inquiry Friday morning and were told by the branch the Snug must be closed, like other liquor outlets in the core municipalities, until polls close at 8 p.m. Then on Friday afternoon, LAB contacted the hotel and said the ruling had been changed and the Snug could remain open.

All government liquor stores in municipalities were closed all day today. Most beer parlors, lounges and cafes with licences plan to begin serving alcoholic beverages at 8 p.m.

Soviet Tanks for Angola

Times News Services

KAMPALA—More than 400 Soviet fighter pilots and technicians have landed in the Angola capital of Luanda and about 200 Soviet T34 tanks are coming in by sea, according to intelligence reports leaving the country.

The Soviet forces are to fight for the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola (MPLA).

However, in Luanda today, there was no report of any Soviet troops. But informed sources said the rival liberation movements—the National Front for the Liberation of Angola (FNLA) and the Union for the Total Independence of Angola (UNITA)—are being aided by white-led troops made up of right-wing Portuguese and South Africans.

President Idi Amin of Uganda, chairman of the Organization of African Unity, has called an emergency meeting of the OAU defence commission to discuss the Angolan situation, the spokesman said in a statement.

The statement said Amin is following seriously the involvment of some foreign countries in African affairs, notably that of the Soviet Union.

New Storm Hits Northern Island

A new Pacific storm thundered over northern Vancouver Island Friday night and today, dropping more rain on the flood-ravaged area, whipped by winds of up to 50 miles an hour.

But residents of Port Alice, hardest hit of the north island communities, who were evacuated from their homes earlier this week are moving back today despite the new storm, a Rescue Co-ordination Centre spokesman in Victoria said today.

The flooding appears to have subsided and the 1,100 Port Alice residents who were evacuated to nearby Port Hardy are being moved back by barge and water taxi to face the damage caused by massive mudslides and floods.

A rescue boat from Victoria was in the Port Alice area at 7:30 a.m. today to co-ordinate the return home.

Many of the evacuees have no electricity in their homes, after the wooden support of a main hydro transmission line collapsed Thursday night.

A B.C. Hydro spokesman said crews activated a gas turbine generator at the Keogh generating station 15 miles south of Port Hardy and power was restored to most of the north island area which suffered through a 16-hour blackout.

But it will take one or two days before repairs are made to the main line and before power is restored to all sections, he said.

Kelsey Bay, which has also been affected by the floodwaters, was not affected by the power failure.

A Canadian Forces helicopter has rescued 95 people, eight dogs and three cats from the flooded Sayward Valley and moved them into a MacMillan Bloedel bunkhouse in Kelsey Bay.

Bob Goldie, who piloted the rescue helicopter, said residents were running motorboats down flooded roads in the Sayward Valley, taking people to a field where the helicopter could land to pick them up.

Another armed forces helicopter made sweeps over the isolated logging areas north of Kelsey Bay searching for loggers or hunters who may have been stranded by the floods, but a spokesman said none were found.

Mobile kitchens have been set up to feed the evacuees and food supplies are holding out.

Kelsey Bay is cut off from the rest of the island because of a bridge washout on the Campbell River-Kelsey Bay highway but the bridge is expected to be repaired later today.

Even after the mess from the mudslides and water has been cleaned up, many of the northern residents will probably be out of work until the new year because of extensive rain and mud damage to logging operations.

Loggers were not called in Thursday or Friday to any of the Crown Zellerbach logging operations in the Courtenay district and it is not known when operations will resume.

The Rayonier pulp mill in Port Alice, the town's economic base, is still closed. The company has issued $200

U.S. Cuts Olympic Security

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A U.S. project to help safeguard next year's olympics at Montreal from a Munich-type terrorist tragedy may go down the drain because of the Ford budget squeeze, sources said today.

A $23 million appropriation request by the customs bureau to set up an electronic security system for the Games July 17-Aug. 1 has been slashed back to $2.7 million by the office of management and budget, sources said.

The project was the creation of a special Olympics task force within the bureau to prevent a repetition of the terrorist disruption of the Munich games which resulted in the slaying of 11 members of the Israeli team.

It recommended $23 million to erect a 450-mile long electronic security screen on the sparsely manned Canadian-U.S. border aimed at detecting any surreptitious crossings of terrorist bands headed for Montreal.

Some of the funds also were earmarked for helping U.S. customs and immigration officials expedite trafffic of an estimated 50,000 legitimate border-crossers on the way to Montreal.

Security officials now fear another terrorist episode may mar the games.

"There has been quite an increase in world terrorism since Munich," one official said. "Even in the past two weeks, we have had a series of bombings in Washington and New York and there was a scare during Emperor Hirohito's recent visit that would-be assassins had entered the United States from Canada to kill him."

Ottawa, Plus Baby or Layoff, Equals Debt Crunch

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Consumer debt is a growing problem in B.C. and provincial debtor assistance officials are concerned the federal anti-inflation program may make matters worse.

"One of the troubling featurs of the program is that people borrow on their future income and they're generally planning on their income continuing to go up," said deputy consumer services minister Bill Neilson.

The debtor assistance division is trying to monitor the effects of wage and price controls, said Neilson, in the same way it is gathering statistics on the entire debt picture in the province.

Federal authorities, who have gathered information over a long period of time, calculate consumer credit in Canada increased about 18 per cent last year alone.

It is too early for the provincial government to come up with those kind of figures for British Columbia, said Neilson, although over 7,500 people have been counselled by the division since its inception a year ago.

By late spring, the division was helping about 140 people pay back over $1.4 million in debts.

Most people who come for counselling are young and married and their total debts average between $7,000 and $9,000.

Division officials estimte about 80 per cent of their clients are in their 20s, about 10 per cent in their 30s, six per cent in their 40s and four per cent between 50 and 60 years of age.

A change in circumstances is the key to why people get into debt trouble, say the counsellors and that's why wage and price controls could cause problems for people counting on high salary increases.

Strikes are a major cause of debt problems in B.C. and this has been especially noticeable this summer on Vancouver Island.

Economic slumps with accompanying layoffs, changes in marital status, the arrival of children in marriages where both partners previously worked, and other changes in financial circumsntaces are common causes of debt troubles.

There seems to be a "troubling trend" towards unemployment in young people, said Neilson, and this, combined with the tendency of young, married people to want to "buy everything all at once," makes them most susceptable to debt problems.

The blame for overindebtedness can probably be placed in three categories, said Neilson: reckless consumers, reckless creditors and real hardship.

The cases of real hardship are beyond the scope of the division, in the sense of being able to cure the problem, but the counsellors can help individuals with their specific debt troubles.

Both Frank Steggles, counsellor for the Vancouver Island region, and Edward Stibbald, working in Greater Victoria, say people genuinely want to pay back their debts.

There are several avenues of assistance the counsellors use, including simply advising people how best ot make their own arrangements for paying back creditors.

Counsellors talk to creditors involved and often get them to agree to modify terms of loans or interest rates. Money is then collected monthly for the client by the division which then pays creditors on a pro-rated basis. Sometimes a creditor will agree to a straight settlement of the loan.

Under a federal program through the Bankruptcy Act, the division seeks a court order to reduce interest rates to five per cent and extend the time of repayment.

In hopeless cases, the person is referred to federal officials to go through bankruptcy procedures.

But Neilson said there is still a general aversion to filadvance cheques to employees in need.

Mickey Nicholson, village works superintendent, said emergency water supplies were being pumped by a fire truck from the swamp which was the municipal supply about 25 years ago, into the distribution system.

He said residents are being advised to boil their drinking water.

Meanwhile, British Columbia methods of handling a civil emergency are under scrutiny by a two-man team studying disaster at Carleton University, Ottawa.

Joe Scanlon and an unidentified man, both from Carleton journalism faculty, made a brief stop in Victoria Friday en route to Port Hardy where they will do on-the-scene research into decision-making during a disaster.

They were briefed by Provincial Emergency Program director Lionel Hart while at PEP headquarters here before flying Friday afternoon to the upper Vancouver Island floods.

Hart said the team came to this province because B.C. had been involved in emergency planning for a long time.

The visit is sponsored through Emergency Canada as part of a continuing series of studies designed to improve leadership potential during time of emergency.

Hart said Doug Rodway, of PEP in Victoria, had been dispatched to Port Hardy as area co-ordinator.

Telephone communication remains intact to the northern island communities because it relies on microwave transmission rather than land lines.

But Hart said PEP communication co-ordinators were ready to plug in an emergency network of amateur radio operators, or make use of provincial forestry or highways department radio systems if required.

The airlift Friday of a ton of foodstuffs from Victoria to Port Hardy by armed forces Buffalo was arranged by PEP on orders of the provincial government.

Eight hundred pounds of fresh powdered milk was purchased through a wholesaler and the balance of the cargo, 1,500 loaves of bread, was baked by McDonald's Bakery.

LOGGING BLAMED FOR MUDSLIDES

Past logging practices contributed to the heavy flooding and damage to rivers and fisheries in northern Vancouver Island, Ed Mankelow, a director of the B.C. Wildlife Federation, said today.

The mudslide at Port Alice is an example of what happens when governments ignore sound planning principles he said.

(The new townsite at Port Alice qas established in the sixties without an impact study being conducted.)

He said the clear — cutting of trees in entire valley s,plus poorly constructed logging roads, and logging at high altitudes where the soil is fragile, increased the runoff in many areas.

"Tons of soil which should be growing trees is pouring into the sea," he said. "Damage to salmon spawning grounds by silting and the scouring of gravel beds is extensive."

And the lack of protective belts of trees along the banks of rivers and trees has resulted in heavy erosion, he added.

"But what alarms me is that some logging companies are still fighting new government logging guidelines to minimize damage to the environment," he said. "They still want to go back to the days when they were free to do almost anything."

Bristol Foster, director of ecological reserves, agreed that the large clear cut areas increased the runoff of rain.

"Development should never have been allowed on the Port Alice townsite," he said. "Now we the people have to foot the bill."

Dr. Bert Brink, a leading soil and plant expert at the University of British Columbia, said the development of a site like Port Alice would not be allowed today.

"In the last two years, the government has introduced regulations and controls to prevent such damage," he said. "But we shouldn't flog history. We should see that we do better to prevent accidents like this."

He said the land commission in the past two years has stopped people and developers from building on unstable sites.

"But there are people who refuse to believe us when we tell them landslides or flooding could occur on land where they want to build home," he said.

Fisheries officer Larry Duke said he expects damage to be extensive to salmon spawning grounds.

Personal Debt Problems Looming Steadily Larger

The other cause of overindebtedness, reckless or easy creditors, is more difficult to deal with and Neilson said it is really a matter for federal jurisdiction and it would be "foolhardy for provinces to think they can turn on or off credit.

Too often, creditors tend to accept loan applications at face value without checking.

Steggles told of a case of one young couple who borrowed $9,500 for a truck and then reported having trouble making payments. They already had $23,000 in outstanding debts and Steggles said when he phoned the bank manager he said the couple had only said they had one $4,000 outstanding loan. The bank hadn't checked before making the loan.

The credit bureau is often months behind so even if creditors do check they don't get complete information.

Once the subject of better credit information services is brought up, with it goes the whole gambit of electronic payment systems which could change the entire credit and financial structure in Canada.

The technology is there, said Neilson, but legislation isn't ready and many changes are tied up with review of the federal Bank Act in 1977.

Payment systems in the future would see pay checks automatically deposited into bank accounts and all consumer payments made through computers with cards which would immediately show if the funds were available.

Personal property security systems would have computerized accounting of each persons outstanding debts which would be available for creditors to see. It would curb reckless loans because creditors could see the exact indebtedness of the consumer.

If the consumer did go bankrupt or was unable to make full payments, the creditors on the top of the list would get paid back first as a curb on later creditors willing to take on obvious risk.

The counsellors said creditors are generally very cooperative and find it best to work along with the division. If it weren't for the division's work in many cases they might never get any repayment.

One of the most common problems the division faces is a wife left stranded with a huge burden of debts.

Steggles called it "emotional or financial rape" and said regulations should be brought in by the provincial government to ensure that women are not unwittingly stuck with their husbands' debts or that anybody is unknowingly saddled with someone else's repayments.

People don't seem to understand, said Steggles, that when they co-sign a loan they are responsible for those debts.

He cited the case of a working wife who spent most of her salary on furniture, the family home and other essentials, while her husband seemed to spend most of his wages on "wine, women and cars."

She paid for everything in cash while he went deeply into debt. He decided to take out a consolidation loan and literally forced her to co-sign.

Three or four days later he left her and the loan and she was forced to start selling off the family possessions to pay it off.

There should be a commissioner of oaths required to be there when loans are co-signed, said Steggles, to ensure everyone understands exactly what is being done and who will be responsible for the loan.

The main advice the counsellors have is to "shop-around" for credit.

"Credit is just a commodity . . . don't do it on impulse," said Neilson. Interest rates very from 10 to as high as 24 per cent and some people never figure out exactly what the rate is and how much money it will cost in the long run.

Consolidation loans cost more money in the long run and people with debt troubles would probably be better off to head for a debtor assistance office for advice, where loans can probably be consolidated without any additional cost.

There are 28 counsellors working out of four division offices around the province. The two Vancouver Island counsellors work out of the consumer services offices at 838 Fort.

Four Girls Injured

Four juvenile girls were taken to Royal Jubilee hospital with minor injuries when a car went out of control in the 5200 block Pat Bay Highway, roled over and skidded into a ditch at about 10:50 p.m. Friday.

Saanich police declined to release the names of the girls but said the driver, Daniel McLean, 18, of 836 Ferrie Road was not injured.

Police assessed damage at $1,000.

Sooke Forest Products Seaboard Shareholder

VANCOUVER (CP) — Sooke Forest Products Ltd. of Victoria, and Ainsworth Lumber Co. Ltd. at 100 Mile House, have become shareholders of Seaboard Lumber Sales Co. Ltd. and Seaboard Shipping Co. Ltd., bringing the number of shareholder mills to 22 compared with 15 two years ago.

Clive D. G. Roberts, president of Seaboard, said the two firms, which are rejoining as shareholders after an absence of about five years, will bring additional annual export capacity to Seaboard of approximately 150 million feet board measure of lumber from Sooke Forest Products and 20 MMFBM from Ainsworth.

The Sooke production is mainly for the U.S. atlantic coast market. The Ainsworth production is based on two mills, an existing one at 100 Mile House and a mill under construction at Clinton. Both mills will supplement Seaboard's export business to offshore markets.

the weather

A deep low pressure area off the west coast with a cold front extending southward gave gale force winds and occasional heavy rain overnight. A southwest flow of moist unstable air will maintain mostly cloudy skies and showers along the coast today with a few sunny periods Sunday afternoon along the southwest coast as drier air moves in from the west. Cooler air behind the cold front will replace rainshowers with snowflurries over most of the Interior Sunday.

Blind Luck Saved This Pilot

DENVER (AP) — Jan Jurek had just brought his twin-engine plane into a landing pattern when turbulence pitched him into the instrument panel, shattering his sunglasses and knocking him unconscious.

He awoke 4,000 feet higher but couldn't see — he was blinded by blood streaming from a gash over his eyes.

Jurek, 31, was flying the empty aircraft, owned by Provident Resources Ltd., a Calgary oil firm, to Denver to pick up passengers for the return flight to Canada.

"The guy called, said he was in there by himself and that he was having a little trouble," said Bob Graham, an air traffic control supervisor at Denver's Stapleton International Airport.

"We picked him up about 40 miles north of here. There's nothing in the books that covers a case like that, except that you give the pilot as much priority as you can. We called out the emergency gear and talked him in."

Jurek recalled on Friday that "we were down to 11,000 feet when we hit a very severe updraft. If you can imagine, the worst possible updraft. It threw my face against the instrument panel and broke my sunglasses. Glass was in my eyes, and I was unconscious for a while.

"When I woke up, the plane was at 15,000 feet. I was blinded.

"I'm glad I went through the experience alone, and nobody else was there to go through it," he said.

Graham said two veteran controllers, Donald Holland and Keith Lilak, did most of the work in talking Jurek down. They shut off a runway to bring Jurek's twin-engine turboprop on a straight-in landing approach.

"They gave me directions that actually enabled me to 'see' the runway," Jurek said. "They helped me to do my job."

Jurek successfully landed the British-built Jetstream without damage. He was taken to a hospital by an ambulance crew that met the plane.

"I still have blurred vision and am under medication, but if I'm lucky everything will be okay," Jurek said Friday.

Drive-In Robbery Confessed

James Archie Hancock, 34, of 1316 Rudlin, was found guilty Friday by a county court jury of armed robbery involving $571 March 22 at the Beacon Drive-In, 126 Douglas.

He will be sentenced by Judge Montague Drake Dec. 1 at 10 a.m.

The jury deliberated 1½ hours after being given a confession by Hancock which Judge Drake ruled admissible.

In the statement, given to police when he was arrested March 27, Hancock said he drove a car to the hamburger stand, went to the window and ordered a coffee.

"I produced a .38-calibre revolver when the waiter returned and I told him to hand over the money," the statement read.

"He put the money in a paper bag and I ordered him to lie on the floor. Then I promptly walked to the car. I got about $550 in this robbery."

After the jury returned its verdict, Judge Drake said that, in the circumstances, he couldn't see any other verdict it could have come to.

MP ALLEGES SWEET DEAL

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative MP Elmer MacKay charged Friday that several Air Canada officials had holdings in a Barbados sugar company which tried to "engineer a $100-million sugar deal at a time when our country was experiencing real shortages" of sugar.

Air Canada, however, said charges that the executives formed a dummy company, to corner the sugar market are "erroneous and misleading."

The issue had been investigated by the Estey commission into Air Canada financial affairs earlier this year which subsequently advised it had no further interest in the matter, the airline said.

MacKay said in the Commons that airline official Ray Lindsay and other Air Canada executives were "principals" in this company which has no permanent staff or offices.

The company had the same postal address as the lawyer for Sunset Crest Ltd., a resort firm with which Air Canada had a controversial lease arrangement, MacKay said.

The Conservative MP did not expand on the sugar deal.

Tory Hopeful Asks Socred Alliances

Sinclair Stevens brought his campaign for the national Conservative leadership to Victoria Friday calling for law and order, less government spending and urging a federal alliance with Social Credit.

The Ontario MP said if elected leader he would invite the 11 federal Social Credit MPs in Quebec to join the ranks of the four Conservative MPs from that province.

Some similar kind of alliance could be worked out across Canada, he said.

He declined to comment on possible Social Credit-Conservative alliances in provincial elections, saying it was a matter for provincial constituency associations to decide.

Stevens said the Conservative Party already has 20 per cent of the vote in Quebec and united with Social Credit could present a serious challenge to the Liberals in that province.

The finance critic for the party in the House of Commons, he said he supports all the things the Conservative Party has always stood for, but this did not put him on the far right wing of the party.

"I'm trying to keep the Conservative Party in the middle," he told a news conference here.

The 48-year-old Ontario businessman said a prime minister with a business background could reduce federal spending significantly by removing wasteful programs.

"Any businessman spending a month looking at the waste in Ottawa could really clean up a lot."

He would oppose introduction of new spending programs such as the proposed guaranteed annual wage. It is very difficult to dismantle a giveaway program once it has been introduced and there should be a halt to any new program of this type, he said.

Rules for the unemployment insurance program should be tightened to reduce the total amount of benefits being paid out from the federal treasury. It was not fraud that was hurting the UIC program but legal loopholes that permit too many people to draw benefits for too long a time, he said.

Stevens also said Ottawa should permit a national referendum on whether the death penalty should be retained and he personally supported capital punishment for some types of murder.

He was concerned that the Liberal government would introduce a package bill ending the death penalty and toughening gun control legislation. The matters should be dealt with separately.

While government spending should be reduced in many sectors, the military budget should be increased, he said. In 1964 Canada spent 25 per cent of its budget on defense and now this had fallen to 10 per vent. Canada was not playing its full role in NATO because of this low military profile.

FEROCIOUS FANGS OF this cougar in classroom at Provincial Museum don't scare these youngsters from grades 1 and 2 at Blanshard elementary school, even a little bit. Maybe Jeannie Leung, Samantha Kum, Temmig Jottfriedson and Doris Buck think that's a smile. Mrs. Caroline Porteous is one of about 60 volunteer teachers who shepherd close to 35,000 pupils a year through museum's seven education programs. This program is called "spider-cougar-hawk" and deals with predation. (Bill Halkett photo)

Didn't Hear Gun Click Ford Tells Fromme Jury

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — In historic videotaped testimony, President Ford said brightly-dressed Lynette Fromme caught his attention in a crowd and when he stopped to shake hands, she pulled a pistol.

But from the swirl of events, Ford said he had no recollection of her .45 automatic making a "clicking" sound, could not tell whether it was pointed directly at him and could not see if she had her finger on the trigger.

Ford's 19-minute videotaped testimony was played Friday at the trial of the Charles Manson disciple accused of attempting to assassinate him Sept. 5 as he greeted well-wishers in Capitol Park here.

The president was called as the opening defence witness and responded slowly and deliberately to 36 questions from Miss Fromme's attorney, John Virga.

It was the first time spoken and videotaped testimony by an incumbent president has been used in a criminal trial.

About 150 persons packed the courtroom to view the testimony on four color television monitors. The testimony was taken at a private Nov. 1 videotaping session at the executive office building in Washington, but the president was not cross-examined.

Miss Fromme, 27, who boycotted her trial for the fifth consecutive day Friday, remained in a holding cell nearby while the tape was shown to the jury.

"I noticed this lady in a brightly-colored dress who wanted to apparently move closer toward me, and I assumed to shake hands," the president testified.

"And so I hesitated instead of keeping moving as I normally do. And as I stopped, I saw a hand come through the crowd in the first row . . . but in the hand there was a weapon."

Whether Miss Fromme, a follower of Manson, actually attempted or intended to fire the gun are key issues in the case.

Virga asked if the president heard a "click" or any other sound from the gun and Ford said, "Not that I can recall."

Asked where the military-style automatic was aimed when he saw it, Ford said he could not determine.

$400,000 GIFTS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Gulf Oil officials spent about $400,000 a year over the past decade for gifts to politicians, including then-rep. Gerald Ford and three current candidates for the democratic presidential nomination, court records show.

The gifts to Ford and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, were listed as coming from a Gulf employee fund, which may have been legal. But former gulf officials handling the fund frequently mixed legal money with illegal funds from a subsidiary company in the Bahamas, the court record said. Corporate contributions to politicians are illegal.

Sen. Henry Jackson and Pennsylvania Gov. Milton Shapp got money from the illegal fund, according to the statement.

The record also showed that Gulf paid a "retainer" of $25,000 to Hubert Humphrey and $50,000 to Lyndon Johnson when each was vice-president.

Fragile Democracies

The unprecedented turn of events in Australian politics—the dismissal by the governor-general of a prime minister with a comfortable majority—has demonstrated in dramatic fashion that the vice-regal posts in the ex-colonies of Great Britain still have considerable powers attached to offices thought to be strictly ceremonial.

Australia's federal system of government is similar to Canada's although there are enough differences to provide an interesting comparison. When the down under version of Confederation took place in 1900, the framers of the Australian constitution seem to have drawn more from the American example than the British.

Australia has an upper and lower house, but unlike Britain or Canada, the Australian upper house is elected, 10 senators from each state in staggered voting. The lower house of representatives is constructed along lines of representation by population. Unlike the British House of Lords, however, the Australian senate has the power to delay legislation indefinitely. The issue to be decided in Australia is a battle that was fought by the lower house in England early in this century.

And the same year Australia became a federation of six states, saw the last attempt at making ministries by a British Columbia lieutenant-governor, when Lt.-Gov. McInnes dismissed one premier and summoned another to form a short-lived government. McInnes himself was shortly thereafter replaced.

The King-Byng affair of 1925 saw a confrontation between the Liberal government of Mackenzie King and Gov.-Gen. Byng, when Byng refused to grant dissolution of parliament and call another election for King. His party was in office before the first vote, and after the balloting was in a minority position.

The Conservatives had more seats than the Liberals but were still short of a majority. So King hung on until defeated in the House of Commons. He then asked Byng to dissolve parliament for another election, but Byng refused. King's government had to resign, but the Tory administration did not last long either. Ironically, in the ensuing election King made Byng's refusal a major issue and returned to power with more seats than before.

In B.C. in 1952, after a teeter-totter election which produced 19 Socreds and 18 CCFers, with the balance of power held by the two old-line parties, Premier W. A. C. Bennett went to Government House for dissolution of the legislature. CCF leader Harold Winch howled bloody murder, crying that he should have been given a chance to form a government. But the lieutenant-governor didn't listen.

The point of the short history lesson is that the queen's representatives in Canada and Australia retain considerable residual powers. The fact they are used only in crises when government is deadlocked should not reassure anyone — that is precisely the time when the danger to democratic government is greatest. To place the fate of a country or province in the hands of an appointed individual, no matter how democratic his sympathies, at such crucial moments shows how fragile the parliamentary system really is, and how easily it may break down under pressure. Australia's predicament is not reassuring.

United Way

The United Way is in trouble. The fund drive which supports social service agencies as diverse as the Boy Scouts and the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society, the Need-Crisis line and Silver Threads, urgently needs donors. Its goal for this year is 750,000 — about $3.70 given by every individual in the capital region would do it nicely.

As reported a week ago, however, the campaign has reached just one-third of its goal so far, and a two-week extension was announced. The mail strike has hampered the campaign's efforts, and a shortage of residential canvassers hasn't helped either. Federal civil servants and the armed forces deserve credit for giving 20 and 30 per cent more than last year. Surely provincial civil servants, who have received handsome pay raises, could improve their donations.

Another minus factor has been the residential canvass, with only half of the donations in so far, compared to what was collected in the same time a year ago. Eight hundred fewer canvassers than the total needed came forward for the house-to-house blitz — although reportedly some able and willing canvassers were simply not approached.

But regardless of the campaign's own organizational difficulties, the 24 agencies who share in the funds raised each year will continue to rely on voluntary contributions to finance their good works. Wages and prices may have been frozen, but the United Way's work must go on for the good of the community. Will you help?

EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

The Circus Cranks Up In Twilight Confusion

In a few hours municipal polls will be closed and a new semblance of order will emerge in local politics, allowing us to concentrate our full attention on the provincial circus.

The ringmaster had barely cracked his whip when all kinds of bizarre acts roared into centre ring. Varying degrees of catcalls, boos and faint applause are in order.

Before we consider the top acts it is necessary to examine the antics of those who groom the stars. Executive assistants are creatures of the twilight zone who can often be found swiping at shadows they imagine to be real. An occupational hazard, regardless of ideology. So this week we hear that government assistants will not accept their salaries from Nov. 27 on — the date nominations close. Not to be outdone by the NDP, two Social Credit assistants refuse to take their salaries for the entire campaign. The lone Liberal and Conservative assistants, a more pragmatic lot, are accepting their stipends for the duration. Considering the future of either provincial party, one cannot fault these gentlemen for a practical turn of mind.

It begins to sound like a silly symphony behind the scenes. MLAs are totally political yet they will be paid for the duration of the campaign. Constituency secretaries will be sweating over the mimeographs in political offices on full pay.

But through it all those noble NDP and Social Credit flacks will try to outdo each other in a meaningless political gesture. It should be all or nothing. Either those persons on the public payroll in political positions should be cut off when elections are announced or they should be paid for the duration. Clearly the latter course is only fair. Even political flacks have families.

Before leaving the gloomy world of executive assistants Mayor Peter Pollen should know that neither of the Victoria NDP candidates are civil servants. Our fair minded mayor referred to the candidates as being "overwhelmingly unqualified", adding that his criticism was based on the conviction that civil servants should stay out of politics.

Gordon Hanson was an administrative assistant to Consumer Affairs Minister Phyllis Young (a political appointee) and Charles Barber, while he has had a hand in some government grants, is not a civil servant.

It was only a few months ago when Pollen berated a Socred constituency meeting, sneering at the party. Now he is in there pitching, just like Barber and Hanson. Of course, everybody has a right to change their mind or their job.

★ ★ ★

From the twilight zone we move to the kleig lights of the big top where we find name acts: Bill Bennett and Dave Barrett. A portable provincial pension plan including subsidized coverage for housewives is being ballyhooed by the premier.

Pensioned off housewives may become a term of ultimate opprobrium among male chauvinist pigs hereabouts.

As for Bill Bennett he has been curiously silent in these early days of the campaign. It took him five days to react to Barrett's price freeze because he didn't want anyone to know he was holidaying in California. It's almost as if he felt guilty about taking a holiday.

Whatever murky nervous system runs Social Credit, it is obviously not too interested in having Bill front and centre right now. Peter Hyndman is still publicly adding up party memberships and well known nominees are emerging from the woodwork.

The leader was up in the Kelowna promising to clean up Lake Okanagan and build more highways. He got off a pretty good line too, saying highways are so bad in the province the minister in charge, Graham Lea, has to fly around the province in a jet.

Pretty conventional stuff though, especially in a province that outgrew the highway con in Phil Gaglardi's day.

Speaking of fire and brimstone, North Vancouver District Mayor Ron Andrews is saying the NDP might take away peoples' land and their homes given half a chance. Andrews is fighting a rematch with Liberal Leader Gordon Gibson in North Vancouver Capilano.

With this kind of hysterical one liner it is a wonder Andrews got his head out of the sand long enough to accept the Socred nomination. The same goes for Langley NDP candidate Joe Chesney who called NDP defector Frank Calder "Tonto."

Things are hairy enough when the circus is cranked up without having to listen to heavy thinkers turn it into a freak show — G.R.O.

Spain: Extremists on Edges

MADRID — Two elements of Spain's complex political future that Prince Juan Carlos will soon have to deal with are growing right-wing extremism and a deteriorating economy.

They are less immediately important than the Sahara crisis, which has already earned him army support and general respect and admiration in Spain for his early sure-footed moves.

His throne, which he assumes on the death of General Franco, already looks reasonably secure in the short term, while that of Morocco's King Hassan hangs in the balance.

Juan Carlos must achieve a transition from the authoritarian rule of Franco to a more lenient Spain at a pace slow enough to be digested by regime conservatives afraid of Portuguese style chaos and fast enough to be credible to those seeking a liberal democracy.

Gradualism is most likely considering that he has no personal political base and must rely on the armed forces to sustain his rule. Immediate sweeping reforms would likely lead to his ouster and an army takeover.

Beaten Journalists

A recent increase in violence by fanatical Franco regime extremists provides disturbing evidence that events in the country could slip beyond control and lead to the kind of bitter political polarization that precipitated the 1936-1939 Spanish civil war.

For instance, last week, two prominent Venezuelan journalists, one of them the foreign editor of a respected conservative Caracas daily, were in the downtown Madrid office of a liberal lawyer, asking him and six other lawyers, doctors, engineers and architects how Spain might develop after the dictator's death.

Four masked, armed men burst in, ordered all nine men to lie on the floor, then battered them with boots, bottles, pistols, sub-machine gun butts, and chains containing spiked steel balls.

As they left, they threw tear gas grenades into the room.

All present required stitches or treatment for broken ribs and the office carpet was stained with blood.

What was remarkable was that the attackers had access to information on the time and place of the meeting and carried weapons similar to those used by Spain's security forces, including tear gas grenades that are tightly-held in military armories.

The incident had the hallmarks of the notorious guerrillas of Christ the King, a group of self-styled vigilantes who support the Franco regime, which appears to include off-duty security men making use of the files they read while on duty.

There has been a wave of assaults on Spanish and foreign journalists by small groups, with the brunt falling on television crews. Some beaten-up European journalists have left Spain and some Spanish newspapermen have been told over the telephone to get out of Spain or be killed.

GENERAL FRANCO
. . . last public appearance

In the universities of Saragossa and Valencia, masked men have forced their way into classrooms during lectures and beaten students with clubs and chains.

Prison authorities in several parts of Spain have asked for army help when General Franco dies because they fear right-wing extremists will try to break in and murder political prisoners, as they almost did at Madrid's Carabanchel prison on the day of the mass meeting in Madrid to support General Franco's decision to execute five convicted terrorists.

The need to bring these increasingly lawless activities under control is equalled by the need to stabilize the economy.

Spaniards experienced a steady rise in standards of living from the early 1960s until very recently, increasing the size of the middle class to half of society.

This rise is now threatened with retail price inflation at 17.4 per cent, wage inflation at 25 per cent and unemployment being curbed only by a recent law that forbids layoffs unless a company faces collapse.

Spain is spending twice as much on imports as it is earning from exports. One great prop of the Spanish capital market, remittances from Spaniards working abroad, is being eroded as jobs held by expatriates in other parts of Europe evaporate. This is reflected in a decline in private banking deposits this year.

Unemployment Rising

The other great prop, tourism, is holding up but has slowed down somewhat as recession-hit Europeans trim vacation spending.

Almost 30 million tourists visited Spain in the first eight months of this year but this represented a growth over the same period last year of only 3 per cent.

Unemployment is officially said to be 2.3 per cent but is widely believed to be at least twice that figure. The Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development doubts that Spain will achieve its goal of 2.5 per cent growth in gross national product in the coming year.

General Franco's no-firings law was aimed at dampening potential industrial unrest but Juan Carlos may find this artifice useless if the economic weakness persists and firms start going bankrupt.

What would give the Spanish economy a needed shot in the arm would be association with, and eventual membership in the European Economic Community.

But the Common Market won't be making any offers until it sees democracy on the way in Spain.

If right-wing violence continues, and is matched by Basque, Catalonian, Galician and anarchist-Maoist violence, neither democracy nor common market relationships will be on the horizon very soon.

RICHARD GWYN

Caesar Was Absolutely Right

OTTAWA — In his sexist way, Julius Caesar first raised the issue about his wife. Purity is not enough. It's as necessary to be seen to be pure.

Twice within the past fortnight that issue has been raised against the heads of important government agencies. The timing is coincidental. Nevertheless, it reflects a growing readiness by public spokesmen—including some who, in fact, speak only for themselves—to challenge the credentials of persons in authority.

At the start of the National Energy Board hearings into the Mackenzie Valley gas pipeline, two public interest groups told board chairman Marshall Crowe they had a "reasonable apprehension of bias" on his part. Their doubt lay in the fact that Crowe headed the Canada Development Corporation in 1972-73 when it was a partner in the corporate forerunner to Canadian Arctic Gas Pipeline Ltd., one of the companies now applying to the board for a licence to build the pipeline.

Left-Footed Start

This week's hearings of the federal royal commission on corporate power got off to much the same kind of left-footed start. Toronto publisher James Lorimer and ex-Waffle leader James Laxer protested that the commission's report would be "highly one-sided" because two commissioners (other than chairman Bob Bryce, an ex-deputy minister of finance) both come from the corporate establishment they are supposed to be investigating.

The Crowe case is the more difficult to write about. In question is the integrity of a particular individual rather than of an institution. Also, the issue since has been referred to the federal court for a ruling.

Crowe himself is thoroughly enraged. "Except for seven years with a chartered bank my entire career of 37 years has been spent in the public service of Canada. If that means I cannot be trusted to act in the public interest rather than on behalf of some obscure private interest, I don't know what the hell does."

The "hell" and the bad grammar are uncharacteristic. Crowe is a prototype of the old, warm-sherry-and-Volkswagen school of mandarins now vanishing from the Ottawa scene—discreet, scholarly, imbued with a deep sense of public duty.

His personality aside, there is justification for Crowe's anger. He himself made public the information that created the issue, and then polled all 85 intervenors on their reaction.

The point of attack on the commission on corporate power was different. Lorimer and Laxer argued that additional commissioners qualified to represent the interests of consumers and of unions should be appointed.

"I did not propose to the government that it appoint commissioners with such backgrounds," said Bryce in an interview, "because I was focussing on the problem of whether we should prevent or allow conglomerate mergers for economic reasons." (Bryce's co-commissioners are R. W. Dickerson, a Vancouver corporation lawyer, and Pierre Nadeau, president of Petrofina Canada.

There is no way to decide either argument objectively. Personally, it strikes me that Lorimer and Laxer make a good point, and Bryce, in reply, a bad one. The findings of the commission will be suspect because the inquiry will probably lack, certainly will be seen to lack, sensitivity to the social and political consequences of corporate mergers. The final report may or may not be "one-sided." Certainly it will be one-dimensional.

Again personally, to me the case against Crowe seems invalid. True, in court a judge with "an interest" in a case automatically disqualifies himself. A regulatory agency, though, is a quasi-judicial body which uses judgment rather than reference to law to reach its decisions. Also, Crowe's past interest seems marginal to the case.

My own opinions—or yours—are as likely to be wrong as to be right, which is the point. The public can think what it likes. It can do nothing.

Excluding the special categories of ambassadors and judges, there are about 340 order-in-council positions in the public service. These individuals—deputy ministers, heads of regulatory agencies, Crown corporations and commissions of inquiry—are appointed directly by the prime minister. He makes his selections on the basis of merit, qualified by considerations such as language and regional balance.

The system works well. It is also far too cozy. Only occasionally does the public get into the act. Last summer, for instance, word leaked out that Trudeau planned to appoint his chief aide, Jack Austin, to be president of PetroCanada. A general impression that Austin was unsuitable for the post caused Trudeau to change his mind.

In Washington, appointments equivalent to order-in-council positions have to be confirmed by congress after public hearings to establish the credentials, and opinions, of the individuals concerned. The procedure often is cumbersome and partisan. It can also rise above the trivial, as in Congress' veto of two truly horrendous nominations to the U.S. supreme court by President Nixon.

Horrendous Nomination

To transplant bits and pieces of another political system into our own is risky. A parliamentary veto over prime ministerial appointments would be inappropriate. A public inquiry into order-in-council nominations by a parliamentary committee would be quite another matter. It would—again, my personal guess—have given Crowe a clean bill of health and have recommended that the composition of the commission on corporate power be changed.

It is sanctimonious to demand total purity, or total competence, in persons in high positions. It is the political thinking of another age, though, to expect today's public to accept such credentials on faith.

Once-Obedient Women Jolting East Germany

By LESLIE COLIT
London Observer

BERLIN — East Germany's self-assured and largely emancipated women are having a love affair with a classic male chauvinist, Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, the famous German writer who died in 1832. Goethe's works are swept from bookstore shelves in East Germany as fast as new printings come out and women are the principal buyers. What appeals to them is Goethe's courtly but firm way with women.

This female attention would have pleased Goethe, who was inspired to many a lyrical phrase by both the noble and humble women of Germany.

In the GDR, where women now initiate most divorce proceedings, Goethe's male dominance seems an anachronism, yet East German women read his Roman Elegies as if it fills a vacuum in their lives. The slender volume was inspired by the sensual Christiane Vulpius, a Weimar girl with whom Goethe lived in free love and who bore him five children.

Not many years ago, women in the GDR were still locked into much the same totally dependent relationship with their husbands that was traditional in Germany. An extreme labor shortage and laws guaranteeing equal pay for women has now led to 84 per cent of women being employed in the GDR. The pill, taken by one in three women between the age of 16 and 50, and an abortion-on-demand law, have turned the once obedient East German woman into a person acutely aware of her worth.

Elderly, long-married women in the GDR are suddenly entering the statistics that reveal East Germany to have one of the world's highest divorce rates. Infidelity or mental cruelty need not be proven for a divorce which is granted if the court merely establishes the marriage has broken down.

'Our men are dull and a bit spoiled'

All this, plus public nurseries for the children of working mothers and job advancement schemes for women would seem reason enough for East German women to be satisfied. Most of them, in fact, say they enjoy working and could not imagine living the life of a housewife. Yet they complain about the matter-of-fact manner in which they are treated by their husbands, boy friends and male colleagues at work.

"We don't ask our husbands to do battle for us but they could easily open a door without going through first or take us out dancing once is a while," one middle-aged East Berlin woman told a TV interviewer. Another said flatly that "our men are dull and a bit spoiled."

It is this absence of even the relics of chivalry that bothers women in the GDR. East German men not only charge through doors first but when seated would rarely think of standing up when a woman approaches. The seriousness with which East German men regard their work leaves little time and energy for wooing the opposite sex. Goethe's romantic view of women as "silver dishes into which one puts golden apples" sounds somewhat far fetched but is none the less appealing to the overworked and under-pampered East German woman.

Not surprising in a formerly male-dominated society, women in the GDR find that they have gained legal emancipation but not genuine equality with men. Working wives often tell of husbands who refuse to "lower themselves" by washing dishes or carrying out the garbage. If breakfast in bed is just a vision for East German women, so is a man who will lend a helping hand around the house. Women can be seen directing traffic, driving buses and trams and manipulating cranes. Men, however, are seldom seen in the long queues at shop counters that drain the remaining energy out of their women after factories and offices close.

East German consumer goods manufacturers take the same approach towards women that all GDR industry does toward production, that is, the producer knows what is best.

Recently, an outspoken East German woman wrote in the Communist youth organization weekly, Forum the "men remain one of the main difficulties of women even under socialism." She cited a few of the items East German men have "planned to make life easier for working women."

The plastic switches of East German washing machines refuse to turn over a certain temperature, she notes, and pliers are the only recourse. (Her complaint, typically, is not about the lack of washers with automatic programs, for these have only just been introduced at the equivalent of $900. She mentions a new lavatory cleaner called "RAB 64" whose directions say a "few grams must be sprinkled on a damp cloth and the object to be cleaned must be scrubbed thoroughly." This, she comments, is hardly an advance over cleaning toilets with the household cleanser her grandmother used. Then, she says, there is the tendency of East German synthetic textiles to shed their colours at the first wash, and the thick layer of glue that must be penetrated before toilet rolls can be used.

Why, she wonders, must prices be so high for tights that women must spend valuable time having them mended. In fact, they sell for 5 marks ($5) a pair in the GDR while the same brand, exported to West Germany, costs 70 cents. "If only a few of these obvious aggravations no longer existed," the writer concludes, "we would be energetic, well-groomed, eager to get ahead, good humored and, even in advanced age, the lovers of our men."

SOCREDS SUCKERED INTO AMBUSH

The New Look of Dave Barrett

By ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM
The Sun

There is one thing, no matter which side wins this election, that will never be retrieved. That is the image, self-painted, of Dave Barrett as the simple idealist among the materialistic sharks of politics, the straight-shooter who was going to bring truth to the halls of the untruthful.

What Dave Barrett did, in suckering Bill Bennett and Social Credit into this Dec. 11 ambush, was as devious and slippery as anything done in politics in this province for some time. Lest we forget, next time Mr. Barrett dons his pious mask, it is worth examining the slickness of his strategy and the method of his sandbagging the confused Mr. Bennett over the past months.

Repetition

There was, first of all, the sober pledge to return B.C. to a more orderly system of elections every four years. The premier went out of his way to state that W. A. C. Bennett's record of calling elections within three years was unsettling, unfair and practically undemocratic. Repetition tends to create a certain plausibility and Mr. Barrett's pledge to let his government run close to a full term became quite believable after the fifth or sixth recital of it.

There was also, of course, the constant reiteration that the odds were "90 per cent" against an election this year. A premier who preaches truth and love — surely he wouldn't risk his credibility after repeating the "90-per-cent" odds well into October? The opposition politicians felt he might have been telling the truth.

Thinking Out Loud

Most slick of all, though, was the sabotage of the inexperienced Bennett. The new Socred leader, in politics only two years, in his attempt to convince the public that he was now running an open party, made the mistake of doing his thinking out loud.

Individual ridings ordinarily nominate their candidates whenever they want. But Bennett announced early in the year that all Socred nominations in the province would be held in a single two-week period in early September.

There were two thoughts behind the plan. One was that the publicity momentum of prestigious name after prestigious name being adorned with the Socred banner would impress the public. The other was that cramming all nominations into one short period would short-circuit the undesirables who, losing one nomination, might be inclined to parachute all over the province in a desperate attempt to find a seat.

Only Exception

The only exception Bennett allowed was in Kamloops, where convert lawyer Rafe Mair was nominated in March. The Socred membership in Kamloops had grown to the largest in the province (the MLA, Gerry Anderson, has the lowest winning percentage, 32.2 of any NDP incumbent) and Bennett wanted to demonstrate to the electorate at large early on, that Rev. Phil Gaglardi had no chance of re-entering Social Credit.

The Bennett plan of nominations en masse seemed logical on the surface. But it gave Barrett open firing ground. The usual shoving and jockeying was going on for Socred nominations in each seat and had fairly well been settled in wait for the September laying on of hands. But on July 21 the premier announced formation of a redistribution commission that would redraw the boundaries of all seats. It would report Oct. 31.

Planned Destruction

To head the commission, Barrett named 82-year-old retired judge Tom Norris, whom Barrett knows quite well through the fact Mrs. Norris is a strong NDP supporter in Barrett's own riding. Norris himself is a Tory, but was a bitter foe of W. A. C. Bennett 40 years ago in fights for nominations in the Okanagan.

The result of the redistribution announcement, of course, was the planned destruction of the Socred nomination pecking order in each riding. Suddenly those who had been shunted aside could see new possibilities under new boundaries. There was shifting and shaking and a new realignment of ambitions as Bennett had to call off his September momentum plan.

Slashing Funds

Next, Barrett let it out that there would indeed be a fall sitting of the legislature — at the unusually late date of mid-November. The session, he announced, would bring in the toughest election expenses act in Canada. Since such legislation would aid the NDP — not only by slashing Socred slush funds but also by providing public subsidies to let the Liberals and Tories run 55 candidates — it seemed logical Barrett would wait for it.

The Socreds last month, even while Barrett was finding an election rationale with his Bill 146 and announcing an increase in mincome, were concentrating on trying to eke publicity out of that 50,000-membership gimmick and orchestrating their annual convention. Their nomination machinery — working on the assumption redistribution would spread out the spoils — still wasn't cranked up.

Relaxed

On Oct. 31, when Judge Norris' report was due, Victoria announced there would be a two-week delay in working out "administrative problems." The Socreds, with a redistribution report and a session imminent, relaxed again. Three days later, the bare-faced little advocate of truth and love sprung the election he'd been looking for all along.

The Socreds were left with still only one candidate named. Even the lowly Liberals had six people picked and the Tories five.

There was one other factor in the sandbagging — even leaving aside the fact of an election called in the dank days before Christmas, during a mail strike, without adequate time for voter registration. It was that all B.C. municipalities are involved in fighting Nov. 15 elections.

It's known 'Bennett was going tfter a number of municipal names — Mayor Peter Lester of Prince Rupert, Alderman Jim Mercier of Burnaby and others whose names mean something in their own areas. Barrett waited until nominations were closed — Oct. 28 — then jumped them with an election when it was too late for them to switch horses.

The premier may indeed succeed in his ambush and get back into power. Or he may have out-clevered himself right back into opposition. Whichever it is, one thing is clear: Never again can this man, who has made so much of his idealism in politics, prattle on about the cynicism of the old W. A. C. crowd. What he has just done is as cynical as could be imagined. What he has demonstrated is that what he likes above all is power and that he will go to any lengths to retain it.

Simple idealism to slick sabotage

STRAY FEATHERS
harold hosford

There's nothing like a cold, damp November day to bring Golden-crowned Kinglets down to eye level.

For most of the year these diminutive insect-eaters — only some hummingbirds are smaller — show a particularly annoying affinity for big trees. If you want to see them on southern Vancouver Island this often means looking for a bird three inches long in the top of a tree 100 feet high.

Fortunately, Golden-crowned Kinglets have a fairly distinctive call note which is usually all that's needed for you to know they're around. On the other hand, if your ears aren't what they used to be, and you have to see the bird to identify it, then you might as well sit back and relax until November when the kinglets abandon their evergreen towers and descend to mingle with us mortals.

I guess it's got something to do with temperature, shelter and insect activity but come the cold days of early winter the kinglets take to foraging within a few feet of the ground providing us with an opportunity to get better acquainted with them.

When you run into a band of kinglets at this time of year, you're liable to find they are not alone but have picked up a few fellow-travellers in their wanderings. One, for sure, will be the Golden-crown's little cousin, the Ruby-crowned Kinglet. Fortunately, the two are easy to tell apart.

As their names imply, there's a difference in the color of their crowns but that's only half the story. While both are generally sombre, olive, grey, the Golden-crowned kinglet sports a brilliant yellow crown — with a touch of orange in the center if he's an adult male. The Ruby-crown, on the other hand, does not sport a ruby crown—or not so as you'd notice.

The crown color that gives the Ruby-crown its name is hidden, well hidden, by an olive-green covering of feathers and is only visible when the bird is highly agitated and erects its crown feathers.

Also with the kinglets might be a sampling of Bushits, diminutive birds which, were it not for the length of their tails, might oust the kinglets from their annointed position of second-smallest bird.

Among this entourage of lilliputian foragers may even be a few veritable giants, comparatively speaking — some Chestnut-backed Chickadees. Throw this foursome into a twittering, fluttering mass and they can become a regular blizzard of little wings, tails, and snapping beaks.

Strangely, in this group the Golden-crowned Kinglets stand out like beacons, mainly because of the bright, golden-yellow of their crowns. The white cheeks of the chickadee may catch your eye from time to time but you'll always be drawn quickly back to the little flashing neon signs of the kinglets.

There's not much to choose between any of these birds when it comes to hunting; they're all pokers, pryers and peerers. No matter which you stop to watch, they'll all be hanging at grotesque angles, poking into, under, and around leaves and twigs, prying open curled-up leaves, and peering into the cavities for torpid insects or insect eggs.

The process involves a lot of chit-chat as each bird announces its location to the others in the flock and receives feed-back from them about their positions. It's a two-way conversation that not only helps the birds keep in contact and maintain their tiny, continually moving, foraging areas but is a sure-fire signal to any alert birdwatcher that the sombre November woods are about to come alive.

At times like these, it's wise to sit still and let the birds come to you. They're usually so intent on their foraging that they sometimes seem to forget you're there. Then you're liable to discover that you can, quite literally, find yourself eye-to-eye with a Golden-crowned Kinglet.

King Asks Ottawa To Help at Kitimat

Labor Minister Bill King has asked the federal anti-inflation review board to become involved in a labor dispute at the Kitimat Alcan Aluminum Plant in hopes of avoiding a strike or lockout.

Alcan served the Canadian Aluminum, Smelting and Allied Workers Union with lockout notice which would be effective Sunday.

King made public Friday afternoon a telegram he sent to Jean-Luc Pepin, chairman of the federal board, urging that the board make an immediate decision on how the federal guidelines will apply to the Alcan workers.

He said in the telegram that "the dispute is essentially over the application of the federal guidelines."

"The union applied for a decision by the board on Oct. 2 and to my knowledge they have not yet been informed how the guidelines will apply in their dispute."

King also said in the telegram that the board should urge the parties in the dispute not to take strike or lockout action until the board has made its decision.

The union members rejected the company's last offer Wednesday.

The offer fell within federal guidelines and would have given the 1,700 workers an 8.9-per-cent increase this year and 6.5 per cent in the second year of a new contract. The previous contract expired Oct. 23.

Present base rate is $5.38 an hour. The company said the average wage increase over the two-year period would be $1.04 an hour plus cost-of-living protection in the second year.

LOOT BLOWN AT PNE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Nine juveniles facing charges involving 60 burglaries spent some of their loot by taking taxis to the Pacific National Exhibition and cashing $50 bills at a hamburger restaurant, Detective Terry Roberts said Friday.

Det. Roberts and Det. Leon Bourque have just finished a lengthy investigation of the juvenile gang. The nine boys aged between 12 and 15 will appear in juvenile court.

Although the detectives investigated 60 burglaries, "we don't think 60 is the total by any means but it's pointless to investigate further," Det. Roberts said. "They won't get treated any different for 70 than for 60."

In the 60 burglaries investigated $5,325 in cash was stolen, $3,500 in property and $900 worth of damage was done, Det. Roberts said. Only a ring worth $100 and $20 in cash were recovered.

"The thing that worries us is how do you get these kids back to a dollar a week allowance," he said.

VANCOUVER GETS BETTER CREDIT

VANCOUVER (CP) — The City of Vancouver has saved thousands of dollars in borrowing costs because of an improvement in the city's credit rating with New York financial experts, says Mayor Art Phillips.

Phillips said the city's credit rating has been increased from a single A to a double A by Moody's Investor Service on New York.

He said this meant the city was able about two weeks ago to privately float a bond issue of $20 million in the United States at a cost of 10.25 per cent, instead of 10.50 per cent.

The bond issue was floated under borrowing authority in the city's 1971-1975 five-year plan, Phillips said.

Peter Leckie, city finance director, said the one-quarter per cent in interest savings enjoyed by the city will mean savings of $50,000 a year in interest costs.

In addition, he said the city will also save $200,000 a year over interest charges if the bonds had been issued in the Canadian market, where municipal interest rates are now about 11.25 per cent.

Phillips said he and Leckie believed the difference between Canadian and U.S. interest rates was significant enough to justify the risk of the Canadian dollar devaluating in relationship to the American dollar.

Leckie said the Canadian dollar would have to fall to 85 cents in relationship to the U.S. dollar before the city would be adversely affected.

Phillips said the highest Moody's rating, three A was enjoyed by the federal government, the Ontario government and Canadian National Railways.

Leckie said the only Canadian city he knew which had a triple A rating was Ottawa.

The Province of B.C. has a double rating.

VANCOUVER (CP)—Brock House, a city landmark, was approved for use as a senior citizen's drop-in centre Thursday. Human Resources Minister Norm Levi said his department will give $111,000 to the Brock House Society which will restore the house.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Lower Nicola Indian Band's dispute with the government over highway construction will go to trial in British Columbia Supreme Court Dec. 17. The trial was ordered Friday when band members appeared before Mr. Justice E. E. Hinkson claiming that the Crown had no right or authority to trespass on two reserves where they seek to widen a provincial road.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The majority of the 300 workers at the Western Canada Steel voted Friday for certification by the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers.

CAIMAW received 166 votes, compared with 117 cast for its rival union, the United Steelworkers of America.

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Municipalities should not have to collect provincial school and hospital taxes and should have direct benefits from provincial income tax and the five-per-cent sales tax, Ted Chace, Kamloops city administrator said Friday.

Chace said in a brief to the property assessment and taxation commission there is an unwillingness by his city to collect school and hospital taxes.

He also said that the current system of provincial grants to municipalities should be replaced by direct participation in sales tax and income tax collected by the province.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Daniel Gillis Carlson was sentenced Friday to nine months in jail after being convicted of stealing nearly $900,000 from International Harvester company of Canada. Carlson had been employed in the collection department of that firm. All but $13,000 was recovered.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer said Friday that crews are beginning work to upgrade and electrify rail lines in preparation for establishment of a light-rail rapid transit system between Vancouver and New Westminster. He said a prototype rail car is expected to arrive here in January but full service will not be offered for two to three years.

West Refuses RCMP Bill Hike

VANCOUVER (CP) — Attorney-General Alex Macdonald rejected Friday a proposal that the federal government reduce its financial support for the RCMP by six per cent during the next five years.

The offer was made earlier Friday in Edmonton where Justice Minister Ron Basford presented the proposal to the four western provinces and asked for an answer within three weeks.

Solicitor-General Warren Allmand also attended the meeting, called to discuss proposed new gun control legislation, renewal of RCMP provincial contracts which expire April 1, 1976, and the proposed reduction in federal financial support of the RCMP.

The six-per-cent offer follows an earlier suggestion that the federal government cut back its costs of supporting the RCMP by 10 per cent.

All western delegates were opposed to the cutback.

Macdonald said the new offer would cost the province and municipalities "millions of dollars and we have to reject it."

The federal government now shares the cost of the RCMP on a 50-50 basis with the provinces and on a 75-25 split with municipalities.

The new proposal would see federal sharing reduced by two per cent the first year and one per cent each year for the following four years.

Recreation Land Freeze Sought

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Dave Williamson, a director of the travel industry association of British Columbia, is asking for a total freeze on the sale of recreational land throughout the province.

Williamson told the provincial commission on property assessment and taxation Friday his comments would not be welcomed by the members of his association.

"However, recreational land is disappearing from this province and is being subdivided into condominiums and large-scale subdivisions and the people will soon be left with nothing."

Williamson said the travel industry has been hit with phenomenal tax increases by the provincial government, under a bill which increased assessments on recreational and resort land to 50 per cent of assessed value from 10 per cent.

"A lot of resort owners have been left with no option but to sell," he said.

Williamson said the two largest resort and recreational areas on Shuswap Lake will be sold next year and eight smaller resorts were sold last year.

Give Someone Special a Piece of History... for under $10

As host for the 1976 Olympics, we're playing a major role in an event that has a history reaching back to the dawn of western civilization ... almost 3,000 years. It's an important and exciting occasion for Canada and will soon become part of our history.

The special Olympic stamps that have been issued to support the Games are in a very real sense a piece of that history. And now, Canada Post has created three different official Olympic Stamp Souvenirs that can be enjoyed and appreciated by just about everyone. At less than $10 each, it's easy to give a piece of history to all the special people in your life.

The Olympic Stamp Souvenir Case is a unique combination of beauty and utility. A special collection of 12 Olympic stamps issued until June 1975 is permanently mounted under clear plastic on the inside and the outside of the case's lid. The official Olympic Seal is strikingly portrayed in gold against a wood-grain background on the front of the case.

Inside, there are three compartments designed to hold stamps, postal stickers, paper clips, even a memo pad. A specially designed water reservoir to moisten stamps and envelopes with the flick of a finger is part of the case's top edge.

Constructed of sturdy high-impact plastic, this unique Olympic Souvenir will be used and appreciated for years.

It's often been said that you can tell the history of the world by looking at postage stamps, because they so frequently depict important national and international events.

In the Olympic Stamp Souvenir Collection, you'll find Canada's role as Olympic host colourfully portrayed by all 21 Olympic stamps issued between September 1973 and June 1975—a collection with a total face value of $5.72. But in addition, the album includes a special text and colour illustrations that give you the fascinating story of the ancient Greek Games and trace the Olympics from their revival in 1896 to the modern Games and Canada's preparation for the XXI Olympiad.

The album itself is exquisitely bound in an elegant combination of plush velour and leather-look vinyl, and comes in an attractive matching slip-case. See-through stamp mounts are already in the album so that the collection is completely protected.

The international history of the modern Olympics is colourfully brought to life by this bright, informative 24" x 36" poster. All host country Olympic stamp designs released between 1896 and 1975 are authentically reproduced actual size in full-colour. Across the top of the poster, outstanding colour illustrations and informative text tell about every Canadian team or individual who has won a gold medal in Olympic summer games competition. This unique poster adds a handsome and novel touch to any room. It's a must for sports enthusiasts and stamp collectors.

Action 'The Will of God' Fired Cleric to Sue UC

KAZABAZUA, Que. — Proclaiming "it is the will of God," Rev. Patricia Kelly announced she plans to sue the United Church of Canada for unjustly firing her.

"That's the last blotch on your record. You're fired," Rev. Kelly said she was told last June. She said every level of the church since has refused to explain her dimissal.

"One thing is for sure," Rev. Kelly said, holding up a petition with 144 signatures at a news conference in her manse here, about 35 miles north of Ottawa: "My congregation is behind me."

Without pay for five months and under notice of eviction from the minister's residence, 36-year-old Rev. Kelly has continued every Sunday to lead church services for her congregation here and from nearby Low and Maniwaki.

A graduate of three colleges, with a bachelor of divinity from Andover College, Mass., Rev. Kelly said she was hired by the Ottawa presbytery of the United Church as a supply preacher for the Kazabazua district.

Rev. Morgan McFarane, in charge of pastoral relations at the time, said:

"She's not a United Church minister. She's an American Baptist but she was never accepted as an ordained minister of the United Church of Canada.

"We're not obligated to give her a reason for the dismissal because she was just a supply preacher," he said.

Rev. McFarlane said it would not be wise to say why she was not rehired and that he regretted her decision to publicize the incident.

EDMONTON—Premier Peter Lougheed "still is not interested in the national leadership of the Progressive Conservative Party," Joe Hutton, the premier's press secretary, said today.

"He has made that quite clear all over the place—even in Europe," Hutton said in commenting on reports that Conservatives in Ontario have formed a Draft-Lougheed committee to persuade the Alberta premier to run for the party's national leadership.

Hal Jackman, a former federal PC candidate and Toronto businessman, said Thursday the committee was formed because Ontario delegates to the Feb. 1 leadership convention in Ottawa feel Lougheed, running or not, is still the top candidate.

VITAMIN D LINKED TO PREMATURE AGE

TORONTO — Vitamin D in massive doses may bring on premature signs of old age, says Dr. Hans Selye, a specialist on stress.

Dr. Selye, of Montreal, says he has induced premature old age — including hair loss and early death — in young rats by feeding them a diet high in Vitamin D.

Speaking at a conference on emotional needs, sponsored by the Hospital for Sick Children, he said Vitamin D, which the body needs to metabolize bone-building calcium, "messed up" the rats' calcium metabolism when administered in large doses. Metabolism is the process by which the body breaks down substances and rebuilds cells and tissue.

Food fads have led to widespread abuse of vitamins, he said.

Foods that have Vitamin D added, such as bread and milk, are called enriched, "but perhaps would be better labelled contaminated."

He also disagreed with claims that Vitamin C is either a good treatment for stress or the common cold.

Dr. Linus Pauling has said that massive doses of Vitamin C can cure the common cold.

"Pauling is one of my great heroes as a physical chemist, but there is no medical evidence to prove his claims," Selye said.

Charles Tells Of 'Squeaks'

LONDON — Prince Charles says he has had narrow escapes while flying helicopters with the Royal Navy but is still fascinated by it. "It's a mixture between fear and supreme enjoyment," he said in a film shown Friday by the BBC to coincide with his 27th birthday. "I would like to go on flying for as long as I could, but once out of the navy the only flying I could do would be from one engagement to another. I like to see if I can challenge myself to do something which is potentially hazardous," he said.

B.C. HYDRO

Bosch has a higher quality reflector. It's made of steel, coated with zinc, lacquer, aluminum and quartz for maximum reflection and improved resistance to rust.

Low beam gives you a margin of safety over the stopping distance of your car at highway speeds. High beam lets you see clearly for almost ½ mile.

BOSCH

At 50 mph, the average car and driver requires 188 feet to stop safely. That's the approximate distance you can expect to see with ordinary headlights on low beam. But with Bosch MS† Halogens, you get over 380 feet of clear visibility on low beams—the required stopping distance plus a margin of safety.

On high beams, Bosch MS Halogens probe 2400 feet into the night (vs about 1500 feet for sealed beams) giving you plenty of light to spare. You won't need to strain to see what's ahead. You'll have less night driving fatigue. And less panic braking.

And yet, with all this probing light, the design of the Bosch lens actually reduces glare to the oncoming driver. Chances are you're already meeting cars equipped with Bosch headlamps without ever realizing it.

Bosch MS Halogen headlamps fit virtually all North American and imported cars (5¾" and 7" round headlights). Installation is easy—just take out the old and snap in the new. On cars with four headlights, you replace only the two low beam units. Complete aiming and installation instructions come with each conversion kit.

In this demonstration,‡‡ ordinary headlamps on low beam show a portion of the truck ahead at a distance of 188 feet—the safe stopping distance required at 50 mph. The same car was used in both photographs, only the headlamps were changed.

In this photograph, the truck is 381 feet ahead—the stopping distance required at 70 mph. Yet the Bosch headlamps reveal just as much of the truck as regular sealed beams show at 188 feet. The difference—193 feet—is the Bosch margin-of-safety.

Where can you buy them? At department stores, automotive accessory stores, new car dealers and at many, many neighbourhood service stations.

Get an extra margin of safety at night. Convert to Bosch MS Halogen headlamps. You'll be a better, more relaxed driver because of it.

A Sense Of Community

By PAT BARCLAY

"It's time to start putting down our own lies, for that's what myths and legends are about. Not lies of deception, but ones of illustration, using bits and pieces to flesh out character and demonstrate what environment and chance have managed to do with the people who clustered in settlements they named after their places of origin . . . That's what The Luck of the Irish is about. It's not Ireland. It's Canada, and this story is a real life fable without real people."

So wrote Harry J. Boyle in a letter to his editor at Macmillan, the firm which has just published Boyle's eighth book, The Luck of the Irish. As his words suggest, Boyle's new book harkens back to a time when stories were written about larger-than-life characters doing extraordinary things in romantic places. (And not, as happens so often today, about mean-spirited characters doing ugly things in worse places.) Such tales are often the novelistic equivalent of the ballad, and they're capable of tremendous popular appeal.

Maybe Canadians have been short-changed when it comes to "myths and legends" about our own "environment and chance", but I think Boyle is wrong to imply that there have been none written for us until now. The novels of Hugh MacLennan are probably most prominent among Canadian "lies of illustration," but the writer whom Boyle recalls most strongly in The Luck of the Irish is, of all people, L. M. Montgomery.

I have never been to Prince Edward Island, but L. M. Montgomery's eloquent descriptions of it long ago persuaded me that it is a place where romantic things happen. I suspect that, should I visit it tomorrow and find things absolutely otherwise, I would still believe Montgomery over the evidence of my own eyes. Nobody, anywhere, has wens on his forehead like a Montgomery uncle, and as for Lombardy poplars — well, unless you've seen them growing on P.E.I. you haven't seen them at all. Thousands of readers who encountered Anne, Emily, Valancy and friends at an impressionable age would surely agree.

Like L. M. Montgomery, Harry J. Boyle understands that the apparently ordinary people and places he knows well and chooses to write about are very special indeed. He calls The Luck of the Irish "a real life fable without real people", and his book reads very much like a modern version of folk tale, as his words suggest. Boyle's lesser characters are colorful and simplified, his major figures morally classifiable as "good" or "bad." The result, once he gets going, is charming.

Boyle's hero is wee Tom Macrae, orphaned younger brother of the fearsome Carrie, who bosses the life out of him down on their southern Ontario farm. Both of them are something of a trial to their well-meaning neighbors, whose offers of help, friendly gibes, and natural curiosity remain unsatisfied even when the Macrae barn burns down and they are left in obvious need. No approach can get through to stiff-necked Carrie, however, until the priest hits on the happy idea of preaching a sermon about Fort Ste. Marie. (Fort Ste. Marie is the site of a shrine to the early Jesuit martyrs. God willing, a pilgrimage there could accomplish great things for those in distress.)

So Tom and Carrie set off, and on the way they meet the Feenys, Grace Feeny, 18, red-haired, big and kind, is promised by her father to a widower she dislikes. She sees Tom as her savior and, after he has time to get over the initial shock, so does he. How the two of them succeeded in outwitting both her family and sister Carrie is a secret Tom's village has been dying to learn for 40 years. We learn it, though, as well as the details of what happens when Tom buys ten "holy relics" on the road to the shrine and inadvertently causes a "miracle."

He also tastes liquor, escapes to a movie in a nearby town, is offered a job on a lakeboat, side-steps a determined widow, and gathers enough determination and independence to defy Carrie. Tom marries his Grace and would have lived happily ever after; this being a Canadian novel, however, we are introduced to Tom's story on the day of his funeral. We also meet nearly every chaaracter in the village before page 17, and for a time it appears as if The Luck of the Irish is all bad. (I read the first three pages of it late at night, finished them completely mystified, and had to start again the next day.)

But once the story gets underway it holds our attention with ease. Tom's and Carrie's shared innocence is skillfully portrayed, Tom's awkward yearnings are touchingly made real, and their fellow characters provide both entertaining variety and the solid sense of community which Boyle values so highly. The Luck of the Irish may be a story "without real people", but they're real enough on the page. I enjoyed it, and I think you will, too.

THE LUCK OF THE IRISH, by Harry J. Boyle. MacMillan. $9.95.

Pearson: Humility and Sense of Duty

By WALTER YOUNG

This is the last volume of Lester Pearson's memoirs and in some ways it is perhaps the best for it recounts his years as prime minister and in the telling reveals the essential humility of the man who presided over the country and the Liberal party through a period marked by high drama and low comedy.

It was through the determination of Pearson's son Geoffrey that the book was published at all. Pearson had not completed the first draft when he died. His former colleagues who read the manuscript were, for the most part, opposed to publication. They no doubt felt, understandably, that their part in the great events would have been better told had Pearson lived to complete and polish his memoirs. But Geoffrey Pearson wisely persisted.

MIKE: The Memoirs of the Rt. Hon. Lester B. Pearson, Vol. III. University of Toronto Press. $15.

What emerges is Pearson's initial recollection of the events, skillfully woven together by the editors with material from the CBC programs The Tenth Decade, and First Person Singular. The picture presented is of a man who wore the garment of power with dignity, at times uncomfortably, but always without conceit or artifice.

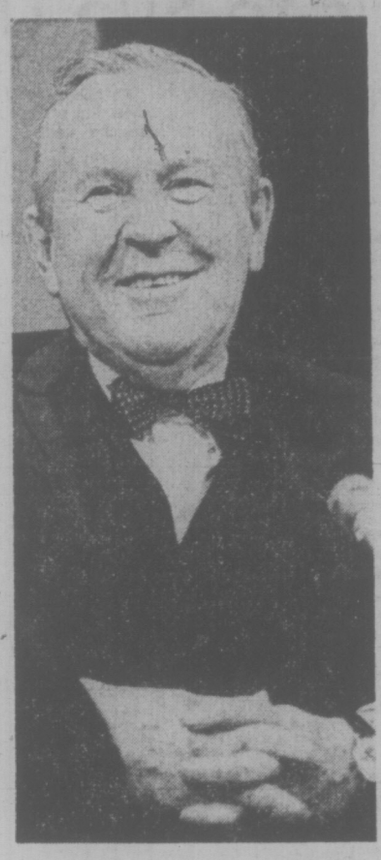
Like Mackenzie King, Pearson saw himself as a reformer, a leftwing Liberal. And like Mackenzie King, who urged his party to the left to stave off the CCF, Lester Pearson believed his party "could not be successful unless we were a truly liberal party, progressive enough to attract people who might otherwise turn to the New Democratic Party."

As King did, however, so Pearson had to contend with the exigencies of a party that stretched from both sides of the political spectrum. When he became prime minister he found that the right wing could not be ignored: "Any successful Liberal party leader cannot align himself openly with either his left or right wing, but must keep urging both towards the centre." There was a limit to the support he could give to Walter Gordon.

Pearson did not have an easy time as prime minister. He did not at any time enjoy a majority position in the House, a circumstance that made it exceptionally difficult to break in green cabinet ministers. His term of office coincided with the emergence of Quebec nationalism, Canadian nationalism and John Diefenbaker as Leader of the Opposition. Characteristically, Pearson is charitable toward Diefenbaker although he makes it quite clear that his final months in office were made considerably pleasanter with Bob Stanfield on the other side of the table.

In the case of Quebec nationalism, he was, initially, badly served by his Quebec colleagues: Favreau, Lamontagne, Sauve and the less significant Dupuis. The subsequent arrival on the scene of Trudeau, Pelletier and Marchand made life more bearable and lent the cabinet's policy toward Quebec an air of credibility it previously lacked. The establishment of the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism was a major move in the direction of awakening the rest of Canada to the awakening of Quebec. As a former academic himself, Pearson observed the eagerness of scholars to climb aboard that particulr gravy train with wry amusement: "Academics appear to have been irresistibly tempted to get a job on the B & B Commission to get on with a research project they had been wanting to launch all their lives, but for which they could not find funds."

He was less successful with the Canadian nationalist issue, specifically American ownership of Canadian business and industry. He was in a difficult position, caught between the millstones of Walter Gordon's surprisingly naive enthusiasm and the pressures of the business community—the "other" Liberal party.



PEARSON . . . it wasn't easy

To some extent Pearson's difficulties in this and other matters—such as the tawdry affair of Favreau, Denis and Rivard—stemmed from his style as a leader. He was a team player and believed in allowing his colleagues to get on with their jobs with only a modicum of direction from the prime minister. For old troopers like Paul Martin that was both safe and reasonable. But for the less experienced it led to a series of minor gaffes that added up to a record of something less than crisp administration.

It is nevertheless important not to lose sight of the major achievements of Pearson's administration, achievements accomplished by a government that was perpetually in a minority situation, confronted with an increasingly intransigent Quebec and a fractious House of Commons—the flag debate is a nice example of the latter. And these achievements: the pension plan, the flag, Expo, the B&B Commission, the creation of the CRTC, amongst others, must stand as a tribute to a man who was, in politics, sui generis. There is as well a lesson to be learned: solid accomplishment doesn't require either thumping majorities or arrogant leadership.

Unlike any of his predecessors Lester Pearson became leader less from ambition and more from an engagingly naive fascination with the whole business and the strong sense of duty that only a son of the manse would know.

This final volume of Pearson's political autobiography is a long distance from being a record of his 11 years a Liberal leader—five as prime minister. It is very much a personal memoir. The humorous incidents he recalls best were the ones at his own expense, and that seems to sum him up rather well.

LACOMBE . . . saintly, but with pride

By JAMES McCOOK

The tireless Mr. MacGregor — this is his 14th book on a western subject — presents a wealth of information on pioneer times in his life of Father Lacombe, O.M.I. (1827-1916). Nothing much new on Lacombe's travels was to be expected; even before the Roman Catholic missionary died in Alberta, Katherine Hughes in 1911 wrote an exhaustive work called "Father Lacombe: The Blackrobe Voyageur." But MacGregor has searched the archives of the Oblate Fathers and examined other source material to increase understanding of Lacombe's personality.

FATHER LACOMBE, by James G. MacGregor. Hurtig. $10.

For generations Lacombe has been spoken of as if he were a saint. He risked his life to take Christianity to dangerous Indians and hard-to-handle Metis.

He shared with his people the excitement of buffalo hunts, often went hungry and cold, attempted to halt Indian battles at the risk of his own life, started new missions and settlements and — he hated this — was sent on journeys as far as Europe to gather funds and explain his work on the far frontier.

In the end he was disappointed. He was prominent in western affairs for 67 years but, looking back, felt the Blackfooot Indians were a pitiable people with the buffalo gone. As for missionary work among them, "All that we have been able to do so far is to prepare a few adults for death, and sow the seed of Christianity."

The Metis, he thought, had become the slaves of newcomers to their land. They lacked energy and perseverance. "What can be done to change them? For over 50 years the priests have been sacrificing themselves for them."

The church regarded Lacombe, born in Quebec, as a master of diplomacy who easily made friends with Hudson's Bay Company officers and obtained favors in transport and hospitality. In a later era he was so helpful to the Canadian Pacific Railway in removing Indian objections to the rails that he and his helpers were given passes to travel free.

Saintly he was in many ways but he was not without fault. Father Remas, who worked with Lacombe in missions in what is now Alberta, complained that he wanted to do everything himself, could not delegate, had too much confidence in himself and little or none in others and had the knack of persuading his superior to let him do what he wished. At the same time he was excessively sensitive about criticism or opposition.

Lacombe was keenly competitive with the Methodist and Anglican missionaries who sought converts. The Bay officers with whom he had to deal often were not Roman Catholics. One was Chief Factor William Christie of Edmonton who helped him greatly. Lacombe wrote: "It is in such cases that we cannot understand the designs of God in leaving such persons in the error of protestantism, they who have been so kind to the Apostles of truth."

Western history also does honor, for example, to Rev. John McDougall, the Methodist, who worked in the same area as Lacombe. Their differing teachings puzzled the Indians, who urged missionaries to take counsel and find common ground. But in the days before the ecumenical movement which has gained support in recent years, the competition among missionaries was no ornament of the faith. MacGregor in his book recalls the Roman Catholic priest at Fort Edmonton, who infuriated a Methodist missionary by getting ahead of him day after day in saying grace at the officers' table. Lacombe and McDougall were polite when they met, gave each other such assistance as a neighbor would on the trail, but each suggested the other was not a force for good.

The divided views of missionaries is a subject which has been largely shunned in Western Canadian history and MacGregor has done well to deal with it frankly in this book. The fact remains that good missionaries still did good work and no one could challenge the admirable service of Lacombe, whom Indians named "The Man of the Beautiful Soul."

SAGA OF RIVER

Robert Legget, a prominent engineer and first director of the building research division of the National Research Council, is fascinated by the Ottawa River as the highway to the West used by explorers, fur-traders and missionaries.

OTTAWA WATERWAY: Gateway to a Continent, by Robert Legget. University of Toronto Press. $15.

The travellers by canoe left journals showing they were impressed by fine scenery, such as the Rideau and Chaudiere falls at Ottawa, but also never forgot the mosquitoes.

Nicholas Garry, deputy governor of the Hudson's Bay Company, passed this way in 1821 and reported "misery in the most Frightful Shape . . . The Night is passed under the Sufferings of Bites and Stings." In the morning travellers awoke to "the renewed Attacks of a Host of bloodthirsty and insatiable Enemies."

Legget is concerned about the pollution of long stretches of the river today. He also wants more respect for history. Almost in the shadow of the Parliament Buildings is Richmond Landing where pioneer settlers coming up the river went ashore to prepare for the overland journey to their land. This historic area was used as a dumping ground for excavation waste from a new bridge built in 1972. If Parliament has no interest in protecting historic sites in its own backyard, the outlook for the rest of Canada is poor. — J.M.

The Musical Marvel Is Also Just a Nice Guy

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Reading Richard Rodgers' autobiography is like an unexpected meeting with someone extolled as a living legend and finding him warm, unassuming, wise and witty, and marvellously easy to get to know.

The composer of more than 1,000 songs for over 40 Broadway musicals, including Oklahoma!, The King and I and Sound of Music, is now 73. He has survived two cancer operations and a heart attack. Still he is at work on a new musical and busy with auditions for revivals of earlier shows and production details for others.

Rodgers' love affair with the theatre, and with the musical theatre in particular, began when he was age seven and will be over only when his life ends.

For those who care about the medium this autobiography cannot fail to enchant. Who is not curious, and who would not be fascinated to be in on the creating of an Oklahoma, from initial idea to opening night?

Rodgers' style is simple and flowing, much as though he were writing an account of events to a friend rather than setting down a record for posterity.

Inevitably the style draws the reader into a sharing of his emotions — the problems, frustrations and triumphs, the sadnesses and pleasures of his personal as well as professional life.

RODGERS
. . . wise and witty

Rodgers began working with his first partner, Lorenz Hart, when he was 16 apd an undergraduate at Columbia University. Hart was 23, a graduate and had already had some experience in the professional theatre.

He describes his meeting with Hart in the latter's home, his admiration for the lyricist's superb gift, and the mutuality of their viewpoints on new directions for the musical theatre.

The irritation was caused by Larry Hart's life-long drinking problem and his increasing unreliability as the years went on. But Rodgers' loyalty to his friend permits only gentleness and understanding to show, coupled with a never-failing admiration for his genius.

Typical was his reaction when his first major breakthrough came. Rodgers at 22 had reached the point of total discouragement and was about to forget a musical career and enter the business world in babies' underwear. At the zero hour he was approached by Terry Helburn and Lawrence Langner of the prestigious Theatre Guild who were seeking a composer for a revue they were planning.

They wanted Rodgers but there was a problem; a member of their company was supposed to be doing the lyrics. With his toe barely on the first rung, Rodgers nevertheless held out for Hart as his teammate and won.

Their collaboration ended after an incredible 55 years when Hart walked out on the idea for Oklahoma.

But even after the fabulous success of that show, the first done with Oscar Hammerstein, which caused Sam Goldwyn to tell Rodgers there was nothing else he could do except shoot himself, Rodgers attempted to try again with Larry Hart by reviving one of their former successes, A Connecticut Yankee. The attempt ended with Hart's death from pneumonia during the run of the show.

Rodgers' inability to hold a grudge, his staunchness and devotion as friend, husband and father, his generous admiration of other composers' work, his keen self-criticism and readiness to admit mistakes, all reveal a personality as exceptional as the musical gifts that have made him famous.

The book is brimful of incident, of intriguing and colorful people, of insightful sketches of personalities like Danny Kaye and Gertrude Lawrence, Florenz Ziegfeld and Noel Coward, the former Prince of Wales, Maurice Chevalier and Mary Martin.

REFLECTING on the Indian summer which brought warm weather to Toronto, youngsters wish it would end and the cold weather come so the city hall fountain would freeze and they could use their skates.

Macdonald Bungled, Deficit Only $3B

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said Friday he made a mistake earlier this week when he estimated a federal budget deficit of between $5 billion and $6 billion in the fiscal year ending March 31.

Macdonald said he misunderstood a question in the Commons Thursday from Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, who asked about the expected deficit.

"I thought I was being asked about government cash requirements when he asked me that question," Macdonald said Friday.

He said he stands by the estimate of a $3.12-billion budget deficit forecast for this year in the June 23 budget. This compares with a $1.50-billion deficit on budget transactions in fiscal 1974-75.

Treasury Board President Jean Chretien, asked about Macdonald's estimate, said outside the Commons: "He made a slip."

He said the government will have cash needs this year of between $5 billion and $6 billion, but this is different from the deficit.

"We have to borrow money to lend" to government agencies and departments for advances and loans, Chretien said.

"But that's not the same thing as the deficit at all."

Chretien added that he spoke with Macdonald Friday and "straightened him out."

Meanwhile, opposition parties continued to attack the government's anti-inflation program. Stanfield asked in the Commons whether Quebec, which is setting up its own prices and incomes commission, has agreed to follow the federal guides on wages and prices.

Macdonald said he "had assurance from Quebec that they will be closely parallelling the federal program." But he said he couldn't guarantee the province's program would be applied exactly the same as the federal plan.

So far, Ontario and Alberta have agreed to follow the federal selective wage and price controls imposed Oct. 14.

Macdonald said he can not be sure the remaining provinces will announce their decisions about the program before legislation to put the plan into operation comes back to the Commons for third reading in about a week.

As the Commons started a special one-day debate on the anti-inflation program, New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent said his party "cannot under any circumstances support the program."

The debate was on an NDP motion that condemns the controls because, it says, they apply unfairly against wage and salary earners but will not control prices and professional incomes.

The NDP motion expressing non-confidence in the government is expected to be easily defeated. A formal vote will be held Monday night.

Stanfield said the Progressive Conservatives will not support the NDP motion because it is "premature and clearly destructive in purpose."

House standings: Liberals 140, Conservatives 95, NDP 16, Social Credit 11. There is one independent and one vacancy.

Broadbent said if the government wants to control inflation it must take on the multinational oil companies, the banks, trust companies and the large food chains.

He said the Bank Act, which is coming up for its regular 10-year revision, should be changed to require financial institutions to invest in low-cost housing.

The government should also change its policy of permitting Canadian oil prices to rise to international levels.

"It is absurd and unfair to charge Canadians world prices for their own natural resources," he said.

Ontario gasoline prices rise 5.4 cents after a provincial price freeze expires today. The freeze was imposed in July after a federal decision allowed crude oil price to rise by $1.50 a barrel to $8 on July 1.

Stanfield attacked the federal program mainly because it will last too long. The anti-inflation bill would apply until the end of 1978, but can be extended.

"This makes it practically an indefinite program in a majority government situation," Stanfield said. It would be "a very different thing" if people were being asked to accept controls for one or two years.

Too much concentration of decision-making power in Ottawa would result from the proposed three-year program.

110 Firms Answer Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — Jean-Luc Pepin, anti inflation board chairman, said Friday 110 of the 178 comvanies requested to provide the board with detailed information on prices and profits within one week responded on time.

A board spokesman said Nov. 7, when the request was made, that there is no question of fining those firms which do not reply on time. But he said the board would "keep after" companies that are late.

The companies included major banks, food distributors, large oil companies and other manufacturers.

Because of the postal strike, the requests were sent by telegram and courier. Pepin said 46 of the companies responding did so in writing while 64 contacted the board by telephone. Some of those telephoning did not have full information immediately available and were told to provide it in writing next week.

Annuity Rate Hike Proposed

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has introduced a bill in the Commons to increase the rate of return on federal annuities to seven per cent. Current rates are between three per cent and 5½ per cent.

The bill, given first reading Friday, also would discontinue the sale of new annuity contracts.

The proposals were promised in the June 23 budget. Then finance minister John Turner said inflation and high interest rates made government annuity plans non-competitive with more flexible plans sold by private industry.

About 270,000 Canadians own federal annuities. An annuity is an investment that is returned in regular payments.

The seven per cent rate on existing annuities will be retroactive to April 1, 1975, the bill says.

Turner said in June the sale of new plans would be discontinued because of poor sales.

Metal Stamps On Sale

MONTREAL (CP) — Postmaster-general Bryce Mackasey launched a new program to finance the 1976 Summer Olumpic Games through the post office Friday with the marketing of metal replicas of official Olympic stamps.

However, he said revenues could be affected by the current postal strike "if it's not settled soon."

Mackasey said of the expected $50 million generated from royalties on the gold, silver and bronze reproductins, revenue for the post office will be $10 million.

This would be turned over to the Olympic organizing committee.

The commemorative stamp collection also includes a 23k-gold foil official Olympic postal stamp.

Cost of t he replicas, to be mounted in acrylic and sold world-wide, range from $20 for a set of three bronze stamps to $750 for three gold stamps, an official said.

Diplomatic Action Asked From Ottawa Against PLO

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—The Canadian government should declare in the "clearest possible terms" its abhorrence of terrorism by the Palestine Liberation Organization, Claude Wagner (PC—Saint Hyacinthe) told the commons Friday.

He said the PLO was claiming responsibility for the terrible bomb explosion in Zion Square is Jerusalem Thursday. That explosion killed seven persons and wounded 34.

It commemorated the first anniversary of the PLO leader Jasser Arafat's visit to the United Nations when he waved the olive branch.

"Will the acting prime minister tell this house what instruction if any were given to our ambassador at the UN that Canada's abhorrence of terrorism by the PLO be clearly demonstrated." Wagner asked Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp.

He pointed out that the PLO was about to be invited by the Canadian government to participate in the UN conference on Human Settlements to be held next year in Vancouver.

Sharp said Canada's attitude toward terrorist activities is well known.

"We deplore them and we have protested in most vigorous terms," said Sharp.

He doubted it would be appropriate to make another protest at this particular time. However he promised to consider the suggestion.

The UN conference in Vancouver will be attended by representatives of observer bodies such as the PLO providing they are not terrorists, he added.

Wagner noted that the Ottawa Voice of Women group has arranged for a public forum Monday at the Ottawa Public Library. The subject under discussion will be "How Zionism is a form of racism."

Invited to participate is Shafik Al-Hout, director of the PLO delegation office in Beirut, Lebanon, vice chairman of the PLO delegation at the UN.

"Will the minister indicate what steps will be taken by the government to prevent the entry into Canada for such purposes of this leader of the terrorist organization. This would acknowledge that parliament's condemnation of the UN resolution is not just a matter of words," asked Wagner.

Immigration Minister Robert Andras said the government's policy has been clearly stated that no terrorist will be allowed to enter Canada.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 35-year-old man was ordered to pay $1,625 in fines and compensation after appearing in Victoria provincial court Friday on four charges of false pretence.

The charges were laid after $825 worth of cheques Harris wrote last May and June to purchase some carpet and furniture and pay for a month's stay at a motel, all bounced.

Harris had originally pleaded not guilty and a trial had been set to begin Friday. He changed his plea at the last moment.

His lawyer, Peter Freeman, told Judge William Ostler that at the time of the offences Harris had been temporarily laid off his job and would have been able to cover the cheques if he had been called back to work.

Freeman said Harris has since gone to the credit bureau and arranged to get a bill-paying loan.

Prosecutor Peter Hall noted the accused had a prior criminal record dating back to 1958 with the most recent conviction in December, 1973 in Victoria for theft under $200.

Freeman said that while acknowledging the record, Harris, except for a relatively minor scrape with the law in 1973, had stayed out of trouble since June, 1970.

Ostler indicated he considered a jail sentence a more suitable disposition but acceded to Freeman's suggestion of a stiff fine and term of probation.

Accordingly he fined Harris $200 on each of the four charges and placed him on 18 months probation.

The judge also ordered him to make restitution — $120 to Mandel's for a carpet, $206 to Scotsman Motel, 490 Gorge for lodging between May 10 and June 3, $198 to Teletron TV, 255 Menzies for TV repairs, and $300 to Ronald Jones of 620 Toronto for two studio lounges and a color television set.

Break-In Was Enigma: Ostler

The possibility of a central nervous system allergy was used to explain the out-of-character actions of 17-year-old David Alexander Bruce who appeared for sentencing on two counts of break, enter and theft and possession of housebreaking tools.

Bruce had pleaded guilty to the charges which stemmed from break-ins at Fairfield Jewelry, 313 Cook, on Oct. 14 and Nov. 3. Some silver cigarette cases and watches were stolen but later recovered at Bruce's home at 1126 Oxford.

Defence lawyer Roger Cardinal described Bruce as an excellent student, a reliable worker and tendered depositions from Bruce's teachers and employer who lauded the youth as mature, courteous, diligent, always anxious to please, and possessing exceptional ability is art.

"There has never been the slightest reason to doubt his honesty or integrity before," he said reading from the letters.

He told Ostler the youth's actions were "a complete aberration of anything I've been able to learn about him."

Cardinal said at the time of the offences Bruce was under a great deal of emotional stress.

He said the youth had been examined by a psychologist who felt Bruce's compulsive behavior may have been caused by a central nervous system allergy brought upon by an imbalance in his blood-sugar level.

Ostler said he found the case bewildering, an enigma, and impossible to explain unless perhaps the theory about the allergy was true.

After suspending sentence and ordering a one year term of probation Ostler turned to Bruce and said: "I wish you luck. I'm very sorry to see you here. Don't get into further difficulties which might ruin what I think is a very promising career."

The judge said he ordinarily would set a period of community service work but that in this case it was not necessary as Bruce's heavy load at school and his part-time job already constituted a sufficient service to the community.

PORT ANGELES — Not too many months ago when the sun was warm, we ventured this side of the border and wham — I ran into an irate shopper.

We had pulled off the freeway and gone into Eugene, Oregon, and there I was harmlessly plucking groceries from my cart and placing them on the supermarket checkout counter when a voice came from nowhere.

"Is that your van outside, are you from Canada?" the voice asked without taking a breath.

I traced the voice to a large man standing behind me in the line but I still wasn't sure just what I was guilty of.

Not knowing which question to answer first, I glanced uneasily out of the window. Well, the van was still there and it looked as though it was still in one piece. Can't be that.

"Yes," I said sort of vaguely trying to answer both questions at once.

Then he pounced.

"Well, I've just come back from a holiday up in B.C. and is it ever bloody expensive!" he said in an accusing way.

★

"Yes, I guess it is," I said as pleasantly as I could. But it wasn't much help.

"Everywhere we went," the large young man stormed on, ". . . prices you wouldn't believe."

As I left, carrying the responsibility for the whole Canadian economy on my shoulders, he was still venting his anger on a young checkout girl who hadn't been to Canada and hadn't the faintest idea of what he was on about.

But you know, he's right.

A two-day trip to this little timber-rich city just across the Juan de Fuca Strait from Victoria has shown me just how costly things are in B.C. compared with the United States.

The big things — land, homes, cars, appliances — are much cheaper here. A family home on a good-sized lot could be only half the price of a similar home in B.C. But it's the everyday things that seem to hit the pocket more in Canada.

In Victoria, the cheapest gas I was able to find was selling at 73.9 cents a gallon. I know the U.S. gallon is a little smaller, but I filled my car up here at 55.9 a gallon.

Parking in downtown Victoria costs five cents for 15 minutes, 10 cents for 30 minutes and 25 cents for an hour. Over here it's a penny for 12 minutes, a nickel for an hour and a dime for two hours — right on the main street.

In the hamburger joints, everything on the menu seems to be a few cents less than in Canada. And, as colleague Arthur Mayse pointed out in a recent column, you get about twice as much to eat down here.

One thing that takes a bit of getting used to here is having to pay a five per cent tax on everything.

A 25-cent cup of coffee is "26 cents please, with the tax."

As the owner of the motel I stayed in quipped:

"The Governor's got to have his beer money, you know."

Peg Buck, wife of radio station KONP owner George Buck, told me she loves to visit Victoria to shop because of the much wider selection. But she no longer has many illusions about the prices.

"There was a time when things like china were a little cheaper in Victoria," she said. "But they're not nowadays."

Mrs. Buck said she bought a dress in I. Magnin's, Seattle's most expensive store. While in Victoria recently she saw the same dress in a shop there. It was $6 dearer in Victoria.

She thought she noticed, also while in Victoria, that grocery prices — "were about the same" as here in Port Angeles. But she admitted she didn't look too closely. And I certainly didn't find them about the same.

The day I left Vancouver Island I popped into the Safeway store at Fort and Foul Bay and jotted down a few random prices. Over here, every one of those items is not nearly so painful to buy.

A 32-ounce bottle of Mazola corn oil was $1.65 in Victoria and $1.53 in Safeway here. A three-pound box of Tide washing powder costs $1.29 here while in Victoria a two-pound, 10-ounce box was $1.49. A box of Kleenex tissues containing 200 sheets was 67 cents in Canada and only 39 here.

On the meat counter, a leg of lamb was selling for $1.89 a pound and was one of the store specials in Victoria while here it's $1.69 regular. Few can afford T-bone steak any more but for those who can it costs $2.49 a pound here compared with $2.65 in Victoria.

Fruit and vegetables are quite a bit cheaper over here. Mushrooms which cost 99 cents a pound in Victoria are 88 here; all nuts in the shell were 85 cents a pound in Canada and 69 here; one small lettuce in the Victoria Safeway was 39 cents while it's two large ones here for 39 cents.

But all those higher prices north of the border don't appear to have been keeping the Americans away. City manager Ken Whorton told me he understood this year is already a record one for the number of tourists going to Canada via Port Angeles.

And as I lined up now on the dock waiting for the Mv. Coho to take me home, it's still evident that neither higher prices nor the colder weather are keeping them away. With me in the lineup are cars and campers from California, Colorado, Michigan, Oklahoma, Idaho and, of course, Washington.

You know, things might cost more . . . but it will be kind of nice to get back on the Island.

United Way Drive Extended

The United Way campaign, scheduled to close today, has been extended to the end of the month in an attempt to offset the negative effects of the postal strike.

Campaign chairman Eric Dowell said a total of $360,165 has been turned into the United Way office, 48 per cent of this year's objective of $750,000.

The extension will allow all canvassers time to complete and file their returns, Dowell said.

He said a number of groups have shown increases in donations over last year: architect's donations are up 22 per cent: chartered accountants up 21 per cent and doctors up 10 per cent.

Executives of the campaign will meet Monday with deputy Provincial Secretary Lawrie Wallace and representatives of the government employees' fund committee in an attempt to boost lagging donations from that section.

Dowell said he hoped for "some encouraging results from that sector."

Donations to the campaign can be made at any chartered bank in the Greater Victoria area, at any United Way agency or at the appeal office.

GOODWILL employee Bob Murray seems a mite puzzled as to how one should play this one-string fiddle — one of the many items to be auctioned Saturday, Nov. 22, at the Goodwill Rehabilitation Centre, 220 Bay. Preview of the items, ranging from old dolls and furniture to an 1880 edition of Dante's Inferno, begins at 12 noon and the auction will start at 1:30 p.m.

Even a Program No Help In Regional District Race

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

As if municipal elections were not confusing enough, in the race for regional district it is difficult to know who's on first — even with a program.

Some ballots are a complete waste of time while others could make the loser the winner — or produce no result if all.

The problem stems from the simultaneous election of members to council and regional district. Election to regional district is valid only if the candidate also is elected mayor or alderman at the same time.

Most peculiar situation is in Esquimalt where Art Young has won the regional district seat by acclamation — maybe.

He is running against Norman Tapping for mayor. Tapping did not seek the regional district seat. If Young is re-elected mayor he wins both jobs. If Tapping is elected mayor, nobody is elected to the regional seat.

In Sidney, city clerk Geoff Logan has lodged a protest with the provincial department of municipal affairs over the regional ballot there.

Only one position is open and the only candidates are three of the four candidates for mayor. Whoever is elected mayor wins the regional post regardless of how many votes he gets on the regional ballot. Unless the fourth candidate, Wilfred Gibson, is elected mayor.

If Gibson wins, there will be nobody elected on the regional ballot, although three people sought the one position.

"That regional ballot is a complete waste of time," Logan said.

"It has no bearing on anything. I'm not even going to bother counting it tonight. I may get around to it on Monday."

In Saanich, six candidates are seeking three seats on the regional ballot. Two have been defeated before the counting starts. In the running are all three candidates for mayor: Ed Lum, Mel Couvelier and James Maxwell. The two losers are disqualified from the regional ballot, even if they run first and second.

The person elected mayor stands a good chance of making it on the regional ballot, although it is possible he could be fourth and out.

The other three candidates are running for alderman: Fred Severson, Sandy Noel and Joe Bourque.

If all three are re-elected to council, the regional ballot has meaning because it would be a four-way race for three positions among the mayor and three aldermen.

If only two of the alderman are elected, the regional seats go by acclamation to the two alderman and the elected mayor.

The combinations are endless. There will be a least one of the three seats filled (by the mayor) and possibly all three (three alderman or mayor and two aldermen).

Victoria stands a good chance of filling the single position vacant as its representative to the regional district.

The sole survivor has to include only one of mayoralty candidates Mike Young, William Hollick or Joe Richards or aldermanic candidates Ann Tarasoff or Kay Woods.

If none of them make it, there is no winner on the regional ballot. If one makes it, the regional post is by acclamation. If more than one are elected to council, then the regional ballot becomes important.

The most vivid example of the weird possibilities occurred in Saanich in 1973.

With two seats to be decided, the voting on the regional ballot was:

Edith Gunning	6,465
Frank Waring	5,128
Sandy Noel	4,120
Fred Severson	3,934

The two elected were Noel and Severson, who also were elected aldermen. Gunning and Waring ran against Ed Lum for mayor and lost so they were both disqualified on the regional ballot although they ran one-two. Lum did not seek the regional seat.

The long-term solution, says regional board executive director Dennis Young, is to have people elected to the regional board regardless of whether they are on council as well. This, however, is probably at least five years down the road and the confusion will continue until then.

In the meantime, the regional district will continue to invoke section 129-1A of the municipal act that calls for appointment of board members from municipal council members in cases where an election fails to fill a regional board position.

Ironically, this was the system used before the provincial government began insisting upon elections for regional district posts in organized territories.

In other words, where the new system doesn't work they use the old system — until they find a better system.

Mind Games at UVic

University of Victoria is offering the public a series of exercises for the mind.

Similar in technique to the age-old fire drill, the navy war games and hospital disaster exercises, the simulation exercises are designed to give people experience in organizational systems.

The games make use of computer feed-outs on topics of land-use planning, water resource management, cross cultural relations, and use of power in organization, and are handled by the game players.

A specialty of the UVic school of public administration, the simulation games are designed to demonstrate learning by experience as opposed to the lecturer-listener method, said Dr. Bart Cunningham of the public administration department.

Each game takes about two or three hours, and although the system is not now widely used for management or administrative training, they have been used to acquaint local officials on how to react to local disasters.

Each participant takes a role in the decision and discussion process, says Cunningham.

A similar games program was offered at the university last year and 40 people from diverse work backgrounds participated, he said.

The department asks that interested people phone the department at 477-6911. Fee for the experience is $3 to include coffee and donuts and wine at the end of the exercise.

BRIEF RESPITE

About 600 Saanich school students got a brief respite from class work Friday when a spray glue tin exploded in a storeroom setting off a small fire near the school library.

Fire drill procedures were put into motion about noon at Royal Oak School, said Eric Lewis, superintendent of Saanich school district.

He said although the cause is still being investigated by the Saanich fire department, it is thought the can exploded and set off a fire in a closet in the storeroom.

The closet was badly damaged and the store room was damaged by smoke, he said.

Ask The Times

Q. Can you please tell me the origin of the term "O.K." and in which country it originated? M.R.

A. After a search through numerous dictionaries, including those specifically dealing with slang terms, the precise answer to your question still eludes us. But most experts seem to agree the expression originated in the U.S., and a commonly-held theory is that it was first used in the American presidential campaign of 1840 as an abbreviation of "Old Kinderhook," the nickname and birthplace (near Albany, N.Y.) of Democratic candidate Martin Van Buren. It gradually became accepted as a term of approval, standing for all correct.

Mathews' A Dictionary of Americanisms says one source claims the initials were first used by General Jackson: "Those papers, Amos, are all correct. I marked them O.K." (oll k'rect). As the dictionary drily notes: "The Gen. was never good at spelling."

Q. What is actor Donald Sutherland's address? S.M.

Mobile Unit Life-Saver

A sophisticated diagnostic machine which Royal Jubilee Hospital put on the road earlier this year has probably saved some lives among up-island patients.

The machine is a $20,000 gamma camera which can produce pictures of a patient's brain, liver, spleen, lungs, bones or placenta by tracing the progress of minute quantities of radioactive material injected into the bloodstream.

Such machines are not unusual in big hospitals but smaller hospitals can't afford them. So last April Jubilee launched a pilot project which has one of their machines taken by van to hospitals in Nanaimo, Chemainus, Duncan and Resthaven Hospital at Sidney one day a week.

In a report on the first six months of the mobile scanning service, Dr. A. G. Richards, head of Jubillee's department of nuclear medicine, said 34 per cent of the 187 scans done on up-island patients revealed abnormalities, including a ruptured spleen, brain tumor and pulmonary embolism.

"Establishing an earlier diagnosis through this service may very well have been life-saving in some cases," said Dr. A. C. Pickles, executive director at Jubilee.

Richards reported that the high incidence of abormal scans is evidence the mobile service is not being over-used and may in fact be not used enough.

"It is likely that requests for scanning will increase as physicians come to appreciate the utility of scanning in solving diagnostic problems," he said.

Racketeers Suspected In Rash of Car Fires

Victoria fire officials are keeping their eyes open for car fire conspiracies after provincial secretary Ernie Hall said an arson ring is increasing its activities here.

"The possibility exists that there might be a racket," deputy fire chief Carl Coates said Thursday.

Both men's comments followed Vancouver fire officials' recent statements that a rash of automobile fires there might be arranged by racketeers paid off by owners who benefit from insurance.

Hall has ordered the Insurance Corporation of B.C. fraud squad to investigate the matter.

Victoria's sixth car fire this month occurred Wednesday in a car parked at McDonald's, 980 Pandora, said Coates.

He said a backfire through the carburetor started the engine blaze, which caused about $100 damage.

This year 94 car fires have occurred in the city, and August was the heaviest month with 12 fires.

"The number of car fires is of some concern to us. We give them very close attention," he said.

He cited a common practice among teenagers as a dangerous one which often leads to fire. Young people sometimes remove car air filters, he said, which can allow hot gasoline to spray over the engine and catch fire.

The department is more concerned, however, about the ones that are deliberately set.

Fish Boat Crew Brought to City

A British tanker was expected in Victoria later today with 34 survivors from a Korean fishing boat which burned and was abandoned off the Oregon coast Friday.

Two men died in the mishap and three of the survivors are suffering from burns, with two of them described as severely injured. The U.S. Coast Guard was considering airlifting the injured men off the tanker by helicopter if weather in the vicinity of Cape Flattery permitted.

Explosions in the engine room of the Kwang Myong 96 touched off the fire about 4 a.m. Friday when the fishboat was about 320 miles southwest of the cape.

While Canadian and American ships were diverted to the scene, the men were picked up by the tanker Anco Templer. Weather conditions were described as "appalling," with winds to 60 knots.

Plans to transfer the survivors to the Canadian destroyer Terra Nova had to be abandoned because of rough seas. A move to have a U.S. supply ship Provider transfer the injured men also had to be scrapped because of the weather.

Oak Bay Power Out

Winds gusting to 71 miles an hour blew down a tree across a power line on Cranmore Road at 12:50 a.m. causing a power failure affecting most of Oak Bay.

Oak Bay police and fire departments had to switch to emergency lighting.

Power was restored at 5:30 a.m., B.C. Hydro officials said.

City police also reported two windows were broken in downtown stores.

More Inflation Predicted As Recession Fades Out

Trans Mountain Pipe

The president of Vancouver-based Trans Mountain Pipe Line Co. Ltd. has confirmed that the company has dropped a proposal to build an oil pipeline between New Brunswick and upper New York State.

"It never reached the stage of being a project," E. C. Hurd, company president said.

"We thought we saw the possibility of building this line and we discussed it with the New Brunswick Development Corp., and others," he said.

"We find that there isn't at this moment enough support, in terms of people wanting to use such a facility, to justify it. So we have decided to do no more work until further interest is shown."

The proposal was for a line between Saint John, N.B., and Buffalo, N.Y., and was estimated to cost $400 million.

Whitehorse Copper

Whitehorse Copper Mines Ltd. reports a third-quarter loss of $556,000 or 16 cents a share compared with a profit of $162,000 or five cents a share for the corresponding period last year.

For the nine months ended Sept. 30, the company has lost $799,000 or 24 cents a share.

The company said falling copper and gold prices and lower copper production have resulted in the losses.

Numac

Numac Oil and Gas Ltd. of Edmonton reported a 73.1 per cent increase in net income for its third quarter, ended Sept. 30, 1975.

The company reported net incomes of $636,543 or 14.7 cents per share compared with $367,698 or 8.5 cents per share in the thrid quarter of 1974.

Gross income increased 21.4 per cent to $2,254,083 from $1,856,923.

During the nine month period ended Sept. 30, Numac's gross income was $6,658,821 compared with $4,831,722 in 1974. Net income for the nine months was up 41 per cent to $1,891,839 from $1,342,856 in 1974.

There are clear signs the Canadian recession is coming to an end, says Joe Kvatum of Edmonton, president of the Appraisal Institute of Canada.

"Prices of buildings had levelled off or in some cases declined but they are heading upwards again," he said.

"Our moderate recession is just about over."

Kvartum made the comments in an interview in Victoria Friday.

He said the outlook for Canada is more inflation rather than a recession. Without federal government actions, the economy would be faced with rather severe inflation right now as the economy improves, he said.

The federal wage and price guidelines and the increase in the interest rate by the Bank of Canada have had a dampening effect upon the economy, he said. If the government had not acted, the inflation problem would have been quite severe.

Kvatum said the recession has affected building prices unevenly across Canada. For example, prices held about level in British Columbia, dropped a bit in Toronto but have just kept rising in Edmonton.

"We have never really had a recession in Alberta at all. Because of the oil industry, including the tar sands development, and the coal and cattle, the province has continued to be very prosperous."

Other provinces, too, would soon be enjoying a surge of prosperity. The economy of the United States was also on the upswing.

Kvatum was in Victoria to visit local officials of the Appraisal Institute and to spread the word about a shortage of real estate appraisers in Canada.

Since the federal government went into the capital gains tax, it has been hiring hundreds of appraisers, creating a shortage in the private sector.

Victoria might be the only city in Canada where there is NOT a shortage. A large number of appraisers take early retirement and move to Victoria, continuing to work on a part-time basis.

Elsewhere in Canada, however, the shortage is quite severe. Appraisers can expect to start at around $14,000 a year and many earn up to $50,000. A few in Toronto and Montreal are in the $100,000-a-year bracket.

There are 5,500 appraisers in Canada associated with the institute plus another 2,000 taking studies in appraisal courses. It takes at least five years and in many cases seven years to complete the studies in law, economics and other subjects and to finish practical training before a candidate becomes a qualified appraiser.

Stock Market Players Needed

TORONTO (CP)—Canada requires much more investment in stock market by individuals, a panel of financial and investment experts agreed.

"We must generate interest in the equity market if the free enterprise system is to survive," said Kenneth White, president of Royal Trust Co., Montreal.

He told an investment conference sponsored by the Financial Post that if companies do not get support from individual Canadians, "we'll all end up working for the government."

J. Allan Boyle, chief general manager of the Toronto-Dominion Bank, blamed the lack of individual investment in stocks on high interest rates.

He said an investor can get a nine-per-cent return on fixed-interest investments but may not get that out of the stock market.

R. Jack Lawrence, president of the Toronto investment firm of Fry Spence Mills Ltd., said that to encourage such investment the capital gains tax be abolished and that companies be permitted to claim dividends as a deduction on their taxes.

Lawrence said it is not desirable for most investment in stocks to be channelled through intermediaries such as banks and insurance companies because it means that investment decisions are concentrated in a few institutions.

Toronto-Dominion's Boyle and Toyal Trust's White agreed Canada will need a great deal of foreign capital for development.

Manufacturers Sales Decline

OTTAWA (CP) — Manufacturers' sales in September toalled $6.99 billion, down 4.6 per cent from $7.327 billion August, Statistics Canada reports.

Sales of durable goods, such as automobiles and appliances, totalled $3.160 billion, down 5.3 per cent from $3.45 billion in August. Non-durable goods totalled $3.83 billion, down 1.2 per cent from $3.877 billion.

The figures are adjusted to account for seasonal variation.

On an actual basis, sales for all manufacturers in the first nine months of the year totalled $62,251 billion, up 5.8 per cent from $58.811 for the corresponding period last year. Nine-month sales were up in all provinces except British Columbia, where they dropped by six-tenths of one per cent.

On a seasonally adjusted basis, new orders received by manufacturers in September totalled $7.0589 billion, down 5.3 per cent from $7.453 billion in August. The durable goods orders totalled $3.157 billion, down 11.7 per cent, and non-durable orders totalled $3.901 billion, up one-half of one per cent from August.

Total inventory owned by manufacturers was $15.171 billion in September up nine-tenths of one per cent from $15.034 billion in August.

The value of the inventory owned was $2.17 for every one dollar in sales, compared to an inventory value of $2.05 for every dollar in sales for August.

WRONG PIGEON

HOUSTON (UPI) — Seven men have been arrested for trying to sell eight fake Picasso paintings to an FBI undercover agent for $1.5 million.

The undercover agent said one of the men contacted him in New York offering the painting, but agents determined the paintings described were in museums throughout the United States.

A meeting was arranged at a Houston bank and the seven men showed up with six of the paintings and were arrested.

They face up to 10 years in prison and fines of $10,000.

LAOS BANS 'BRAINWASH' TV PROGRAMS

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — The Communist-led Pathet Lao government has ordered Laotians to stop tuning in television and radio broadcasts from neighboring Thailand.

The new order labelled Thai Radio and TV programs "reactionary and brainwashing" and ordered householders to remove the antennas which allow them to pick up telecasts from a relay station at Khon Khaen, a provincial capital roughly halfway between Bangkok and the Laotian border.

Laos has no television station of its own and the only radio station is under rigid government control.

BIG CRIME CALLED JUST BIG BUSINESS

VANCOUVER (CP) — A United States crime expert said organized crime is a business and the way to fight it is to increase the cost of doing business.

Ralph Salerno, well-known New York expert on organized crime and former policeman, said this is the solution to the problem of drug trafficking in Vancouver.

"I don't think many judges think of the sentence in terms of increasing the cost of importing heroin into Canada," he said.

Salerno said the price a trafficker gets for heroin is the income of the business, and there are operating costs such as the price of employees and the cost of legal defences.

Increasing the costs by giving drug couriers stiff sentences makes the business much less lucrative for the top operators, Mr. Salerno said.

In the U.S., judges often order a courier deported from the country instead of giving him a stiff jail sentence, he said.

"What the judges don't understand is that when this guy goes back to Hong Kong, Bolivia, Peru or wherever he came from and says 'gee they caught me but they didn't put me in jail — they just turned me loose and kicked me out' that it becomes much easier for the big businessman to get 20 others to make a rup for him," said Salerno.

Weather, Pollution Created by Cities

WASHINGTON (AP) — The heat from buildings and streets causes more rainfall and worsens pollution in cities, a meteorologist reported today.

"The change from natural, usually vegetated ground to concrete, stone and asphalt" has altered the temperatures in cities, creating what has been labelled "the urban heat island," Helmut Landsberg of the University of Maryland told a House of Representatives subcommittee.

"In summer there is convincing evidence that the heat island initiates and intensifies showers over the urban areas and some distance downwind," he said. "About 10 per cent seasonal rainfall increases have been well documented.

"The heat island further distorts the windfield in and around the city.This may at times lead to recirculation of pollufants rather than their dispersal downwind."

He said the influence of air pollution in urban and industrial areas is "measurable and substantial" and a list of its effects "is discouraging."

"It starts with reduced sunshine and restrictions on visual range. There are notable increases in fog. There are some influences on cloud and also on precipitation formation."

But he said "available information shows that these effects are reversible and improvements have occurred where pollution controls have been instituted."

Other meteorologists said Thursday that man-made pollution may change long-range global weather patterns, but they are not sure what forms the changes will take. They also said there is no evidence that pollution has so far caused any worldwide changes in climate.

But Edward Epstein, associate administrator of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, said polution-caused acidity in rain and snow has killed fish in mountain lakes and may be responsible for weather changes that brought about agricultural failures.

Measurements indicate the amount of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere is growing and "almost certainly some climactic effects must result," Epstein said.

However, he said, scientists are uncertain about the specific nature of the effects or where they will occur.

Epstein said that atmospheric carbon dioxide is expected to increase by about 20 per cent by the end of the 20th century. By 2025, about twice as much carbon dioxide will be in the atmosphere as before the industrial era began, he said.

Joseph Knox, reading a paper prepared by Michael MacCracken of the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory in California, said increased carbon dioxide, given off by burning fossil fuels, can raise global temperatures, causing the polar icecap to melt and raising sea levels.

Knox and Epstein testified before the House science and technology subcommittee on the environment and the atmosphere. The committee is considering the efffects of low levels of pollution on the environment.

Epstein said the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration predicted that future gloal temperatures will increase by an average of 2.9 degrees Celsius but that this computer forecast was based on limiting simplifications.

Knox warned that even relatively small changes can have major effects in sensitive areas.

Resistant Bacteria Studied

LEEDS, England (CP) — Scientists at Leeds University are aiming to find out what makes bacteria become resistant to drugs. Work, starting in the department of biochemistry in October, will aim to find out where the resistance comes from in the first place and how it spreads.

Drug resistance can be transmitted from one species of bacteria to another, through what are called R factors in their genetic blueprints.

One particular group of bacteria which the research team will look at closely is already suspected of harboring R factors. These are the Myxobacteria, which are found mostly in soil, animal droppings and rotten wood. They are capable of surviving indefinitely without nutrient and of multiplying whenever it becomes available.

It is hoped that the research will yield information that will help doctors and scientists to use drugs, particularly life-saving ones, in ways that will minimize the spread of resistance in bacteria.

The project is supported by three years from Britain's Medical Research Council.

Scraper Kills Man

DELTA (CP) — Wilfred Usselman, 35, of Port Coquitlam, was fatally crushed between two road scrapers. He was operating one of two road scrapers at the Ocean Cement Ltd. plant on Tilbuery Island. Police said Usselman got out of the scraper he was driving to remove a sign, then the two scrapers collided.

NON-PARTISAN TEACHER ROLE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bill Broadley, president of the B.C. Teachers' Federation, said Friday the federation will not play a partisan role in the provincial election campaign.

Instead, he said, teachers are being asked to work and vote on an individual basis for the candidates of their choice.

The BCTF position marks a sharp change from its stance in the 1972 provincial election campaign, when it campaigned for the defeat of the Social Credit government by working for candidates most likely to defeat Socred candidates.

Broadley said there are "pros and cons" for both major parties.

"NDP action in education has been much more positive than that of the last three years of the Socred government," he said. "But this is not to say the record of the NDP is as good as it could have been."

Asked if teachers might find themselves after the election with the very government they worked so hard to unseat in 1972, Broadley said, "That's possible. But the (Social Credit Party) seems to be trying to convince the public that it has changed."

Barrett Rakes Prairie Cash

SASKATOON (CP) — Premier Dave Barrett took time off from his British Columbia election campaign Friday night to give 1,500 Saskatchewan New Democrats a laugh-filled evening at their annual convention.

His Prairie colleagues, who later threw piles of cash and cheques into buckets to help the B.C. campaign, rocked with laughter for most of the 45-minute speech as the man who called himself "little, old, fat Dave" described his dealings with "free enterprise" forces.

But there were also serious undertones, as when he described an advertisment he said the paper company Crown Zellerbach had prepared offering to sell its town of Ocean Falls.

"Instant town — all you add is people," Barrett quoted the advertisement as saying.

He described it as deplorable that a corporation could unilaterally makes a decision to close a town of 2,000 residents and that the former Social Credit government would be willing to accept that decision.

Former premier W. A. C. Bennett said the government could not interfere and keep an uneconomic operation going.

Instead, he said, the New Democrats were elected in 1972, purchased the town and made it into a success under a Crown corporation.

In North Delta, Social Credit 1972, purchased the town and made it into a success under a Crown corporation.

In North Delta, Social Credit leader Bill Bennett officially began his campaign for the Dec. 11 election and said he would give leaseholders of Crown land the right to purchase the property if his party forms the next government.

Bennett told 700 supporters at an election rally in this Vancouver suburb that Social Credit administration would refuse to allow "our people being tenants of the state."

He declined to give any details of his proposal in an interview later.

The opposition leader in the last legislature said Premier Barrett betrayed the electorate by not fulfilling his 1972 election promises.

"Do you remember those ads?" Bennett asked the crowd, waving a 1972 newspaper advertisement. "They promised us $25 car insurance.

In Port Alberni, Liberal leader Gordon Gibson said Friday the key to a loss by the New Democratic Party government in the Dec. 11 provincial election will be the Liberals gaining the balance of power.

Asked how a minority government might effect British Columbia, Gibson, here to attend the Alberni constituency nomination convention said "minority situations can be very good at times because they are very responsive to what the public wants."

Barrett, Bennett Release Schedules

Canadian Press

Premier Barrett and Social Credit leader Bill Bennett Friday released their itineraries for the next week in the Dec. 11 provincial election campaign.

On Monday, the premier will attend a coffee party in Ladysmith and speak at a public meeting in Duncan.

On Tuesday he will speak to a conference on the family here before leaving for Vancouver and Fort St. John.

On Wednesday he visits Daswon Creek, Prince George and Mackenzie and the following day he will be in Burns Lake, Terrace and Kitimat. On Friday he will visit Port Simpson and Prince Rupert.

Barrett will leave Prince Rupert Saturday and spend the rest of that day and Sunday in his home riding of Coquitlam.

Bennett will visit Prince Rupert and Terrace on Monday and travel Tuesday to Haney for a public rally.

On Wednesday he will be in Kamloops and Merritt and the next day in Chase, Salmon Arm and Vernon.

He will visit Revelstoke on Friday and return the same day to Kamloops for a public rally. The next day he will be in Dawson Creek and Fort St. John.

2 Ex-Grits Unopposed As Socreds

VANCOUVER (CP) — Former Liberal MLAs, Dr. Pat McGeer and Garde Gardom were unopposed Thursday night as they took the Social Credit nomination for the two seats in Vancouver-Point Grey riding for the Dec. 11 provincial election.

"We want better government, not more government; social reform, not socialism; fiscal responsibility, not fiscal folly," Gardom told the crowd.

McGeer, saying his jump in September to Social Credit — he and Gardom had sat as independents since leaving the Liberal Party in May — came after "seeing the light," described the election as a referendum for or against socialism.

In Prince George, Fred House, 33, president of the British Columbia Association of Non-Status Indians, said he will seek the Liberal nomination in Fort George constituency in the Dec. 11 provincial election.

House, originally from Fause, Alta., now is based in Surrey.

The Fort George seat was held in the last legislature by Alf Nunweiler, minister without portfolio responsible for northern affairs in the NDP government. He is nominated again, along with Al Anderton, a Progressive Conservative.

CanCel Lays Off Shift

CASTLEGAR (CP) — The graveyard shift at the Canadian Cellulose sawmill operation will be laid off on Monday, a company spokesman said today.

Gordon McLachlin, vice-president of logging and lumber operations, said about 100 members of the International Woodworkers of America will be affected. The men, employed as production workers or maintenance men, finished their last shift this morning.

Wayne Nolan, president of the IWA Local 1-405, was to meet with government and company representatives in Vancouver to discuss getting the men back to work.

ITT

International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. reports its third quarter profits dropped 26.6 per cent, but directors still voted to raise its quarterly common stock dividend by two cents to 40 cents a share. Third-quarter net income was $82 million or 66 cents a share, compared with $111.6 million of 90 cents a share the same period last year. Sales and revenues were up .1 per cent to $2.72 billion from last year's $2.71 billion.

Housewife Pension Plan Cost Not Known: Stupich

No one knows what Premier Barrett's election promise of pensions for housewives will cost the provincial government.

Finance Minister Dave Stupich said Friday it is impossible to estimate the cost of the pension scheme which would allow people like housewives who don't have paying jobs and those who move around a great deal to have permanent pension plans.

Barrett started thinking about the program about two years ago and earlier this year a proposal was made to federal authorities, said Stupich.

When it was turned down, formal planning for a straight provincial program was started.

The Vancouver Status of Women said Friday the subsidized pension plan for homemakers is a step towards equal partnership in marriage.

"It is time that homemakers were acknowledged as vital and independent contributors to the economy," a Status of Women release said.

"As homemaking is unpaid work, performed mostly by women, their status is mostly determined by the economic importance society attaches to such work. Therefore, inclusion of homemakers in a subsidized pension plan recognizes their important contribution."

Meanwhile, Stupich also said the cabinet will decide next week if it is going to remove school taxes from farm property early next year.

He said a decision will be announced on Nov. 25 at the British Columbia Federation of Agriculture convention in Prince George.

Stupich said Barrett favors removal of the taxes but he himself is waiting for a recommendation from the finance department before presenting the proposal to cabinet.

Oak Bay Able to Adapt and Defend

CHILLIWACK — Oak Bay coach Bernie McNally-Dawes suggested last week his soccer team is liable to show its best form on a fast pitch.

But slow ones, which have been prevalent for their most important games of the season, haven't hurt Oak Bay.

The Bays' ability to adapt to existing conditions is just another reason McNally-Dawes' charges have reached the provincial high school soccer final.

Centennial slipped past Vancouver Technical, 3-2, in the other semi-final played at Abbotsford.

Field conditions have not been good. Rain has plagued the 16-team tournament for the past two days. Some fields had to be closed and games were moved to alternative sites.

But conditions may be slighter better today. The final was scheduled for A. J. Rundle school here. It hasn't been used for more than a month and should be in good shape.

The field's condition shouldn't worry Oak Bay. Despite soggy pitches, the Bays knocked off previously-unbeaten Reynolds and then Spectrum in the Victoria-area playoffs. In equally-difficult conditions here, Oak Bay sidelined Burnaby North Vikings, Rutland Voodoos and, finally, Centennial.

Louis DeFrias emerged as Oak Bay's scoring hero, but had to share the spotlight with the defence.

McNally-Dawes agreed his defence made the difference.

"Gladstone is a strong, aggressive side," he said, "but our defenders prevented them from doing anything too dangerous. Our goalie (Scott McDonald) was tested only once . . . and he made a fantastic save."

Then the defence, sparked by Mark Bolli, took over. Bolli, who played for Victoria High Tyees last season, had outstanding support from fullback Ken Anderson and halfbacks Grant Olson, Paul Monaghan and Ken Martins.

And, of course, McDonald was there when the Bays needed him.

Oak Bay had two excellent chances to relieve some of the pressure but both Peter Zachary and Joe Mendonca missed penalty shots.

At Abbotsford, Andy Sears scored twice and Graham Hogarth added the other as Coquitlam edged Tech. Dale Mitchell scored both of Vancouver's goals to account for all seven scored by Tech in its three games.

In consolation play Friday, Spectrum cruised to an easy 8-0 victory over Alberni and faced Rutland today to decide the tournament's sixth and ninth places.

Spectrum won as it pleased, getting two goals from Julius Karpati and one each from Dalgeet Ghag, Ron Vincent, Dave Shepherd, Tarey Pollock, Dan Hood and Doug Vincent.

Pros: The Money Tree Is Being Pruned Back

The professional sports money pinch is on in earnest and if the fringe players will be the first to feel the crunch, can next year's crop of graduating heroes, in most sports, be far behind?

It could be, and sooner than many athletes think. For right now many clubs in all major sports are embarked hell-bent on a path to economic suicide. And if they don't get off, or adopt a tight-money policy, which appears to be the only answer, they could be derailed forever.

Think not. Think again.

First, witness the collapse of the World Football League. This venture was ill-conceived at the very beginning and never did, if the truth were known, get off the ground from the many launching pads across the country. Millions of dollars were lost.

In Canada, take the said case of the B.C. Lions. They suffered their worst year ever and haven't paid their stadium rental yet. They have asked for a reprieve and will likely get it. But their case isn't dissimilar from other clubs in the CFL many of which are also in financial straits.

Then there was the recent warning issued by the presidet of the American Basketball Association. "There is no way professional basketball can survive if 25 of the 28 teams in both leagues lose substantial amounts of money every year," said John Brown.

Last year, Kentucky Colonels — champions of the ABA — lost money along with every other team in the association and 15 of the 18 clubs in the NBA. The losses in both leagues totalled over $16 million.

Now too, of course, more of the expected has come to pass. Several teams in the World Hockey Association are in trouble and probably have been in that financial bind since their inception.

So what's going to happen? In basketball, some of the club owners have simply refused to pay the huge raises demanded by some of their star performers. They are prepared to let their stars sit out rather than agree to a burden that may force them to the wall. This is a two-league problem and professional basketball's future could very well be at stake unless there is a severe cutback in salaries. It is felt that the limit for ticket prices has been reached and that goes for all pro sports.

Closer to home, it's a certainty that this year's fringe players in the AHA and the NHL and next spring's crop of graduating juniors will find they no longer are in a seller's market such as existed when the WHA was being formed. That's what caused the inflated salaries and the bidding war between the two leagues.

General manager Punch Imlach of the Buffalo Sabres possibly tipped management's hand recently when he said no longer will clubs pay a major league contract to a minor league player which is often the case now. In other words, all players signed to the NHL won't necessarily be considered of NHL calibre until they prove themselves.

And most contracts, if not all, will likely have a minor-league clause written in.

It has also been said that come next June, the NHL teams will probably be interested in signing only first-round choices to contracts. The WHA's Ben Hatskin has been reported as saying that his league may sign second-round picks. But both leagues appear in agreement that three years will possibly be the length of any contract except in exceptional cases.

It is felt that three years is ample time for a player to prove himself. After that, he'll either be a regular or a bench sitter and, as bench sitters won't be welcome, they will be without a contract, or playing in the minors, or in Sweden, or wherever.

And sure, the squeeze already is on. Steve Cardwell, who got $60,000 for playing with Minnesota Fighting Saints of the WHA last season, isn't wanted by anyone this year. Fern Rivard, a journeyman goalkeeper, who received $50,000 for playing with Minnesota North Stars of the NHL, also is out of hockey. Player agents have admitted that one of their most important jobs now is negotiating suitable releases for their clients. And Jim Devellano, director of scouting for the New York Islanders, says his club has only 32 players under contract this season, which is 16 fewer than last year, and more cutbacks are planned.

Yes, the boom is over and the pendulum has started on the way back. And may be just in time.

Pilot of Flames Says He's Eager For Bruin Test

By The Canadian Press

A two-game National Hockey League winning streak has restored the confidence of Atlanta Flames coach Fred Creighton.

Moments after the Flames had defeated Washington Capitals 4-1 Friday night, Creighton admitted he was looking forward to tonight's game with Boston Bruins at Atlanta's Omni.

"It's our chance to have our most productive week of the year," said Creighton. "We've won two in a row and now have a chance to make it three.

"I was thinking before the game that if we could do something tonight it would help our chances for tomorrow, our biggest game to date," he said. "Even though it's not in our division, it would be a big lift for us if we could get something going there."

Atlanta's victory over the Capitals came two days after the team defeated Kansas City Scouts 2-1 and put its record at 7-8-1. The Capitals, with five losses at home, are now 2-13-2.

In the only other league game Friday night, Toronto Maple Leafs downed California Seals 4-2.

"Thank goodness we won tonight because we have been having our troubles," said Fjett. "You have to get a few breaks."

Washington coach Milt Schmidt wasn't happy with the performance of his Capitals.

"We've got to learn to check," said Schmidt. "I guess I'm falling down on the job in that area, but I can't do it for them."

Capitals' goalie Ron Low was hit on the right cheek bone with a shot from Curt Bennett and the wound required 12 stitches. Schmidt said, however, that he would be able to play if he can put on a face mask.

Washington captain Billy Clement suffered a possible slight shoulder separation when he hit the goal post and crashed into the boards behind the Atlanta net.

Ultimatum Issued to Hockey Referees

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

The British Columbia Amateur Hockey Association is going to start suspending rules-enforcers who are refusing to observe official regulations.

Don Ewart of Penticton, acting president of the BCAHA, says any referee who refuses to wear a helmet while officiating will be suspended starting this Sunday.

"There have been scattered pockets of objection," Ewart said while on a business trip to Victoria this week, "so starting this Sunday, all referees who refuse to wear helmets, as required by the rules, will be suspended from all activities."

"All activities means just that. Not only will they be suspended from refereeing, but they also will not be allowed to coach, manage, play, etcetera, etcetera, and etcetera."

The helmets-for-referees rule is new this year (rule 40, section Q in the official Canadian Amateur Hockey Association rule book).

The Vancouver Island district, one of seven which form the provincial association, is one of the "scattered pockets of resistance." Ewart admitted "there has been strong objection" from the Island.

Some Greater Victoria officials were quoted as saying last month they would resign rather than wear the helmets. Ewart, who inherited the BCAHA president's duties when Frank Spring of Cranbrook suffered a heart attack earlier this fall, said he was "aware of the threat."

He admitted there are similar "pockets of resistance" throughout Canada.

"By and large, most referees are getting used to the idea and are wearing the helmets. For example, all officials in the B.C. Junior League as well as the Western International League are wearing them, and they're happy.

"Still, a few believe they may be giving up their manhood if they wear the helmet," Ewart continued.

"There are a lot of rules that I don't agree with, but we have to live with them. The CAHA rules call for referees to wear helmets, and they should make the best of it. This isn't the time or place to argue about it. The time to bring it up is at the (CAHA's) annual convention.

"We have enough trouble in hockey without our officials adding to them."

Ewart said B.C. referee-in-chief Jim Mailey of Trail "is in complete agreement" with the decision to start suspending referees.

Ewart "hopes" the BCAHA will not have to suspend any referee.

"The only ones who will suffer will be our youngsters. We'll just have to resort to a faster training program but, in some cases, the level of refereeing may not be up to the usual standards.

"Your South Island Junior 'B' League is an excellent league, for example, but we may have trouble supplying qualified officials. That's when it (the referees' suspensions and-or resignations) will hurt.

"Don Funk, one of the most qualified officials on the Island, has no qualms about wearing the helmet. He's willing to wear it, but Don can only work so many games."

Ewart said the Western Canada Major Junior League "doesn't come under our jurisdiction" and helmetless referees will be allowed at home games involving Victoria Cougars, New Westminster Bruins and Kamloops Chiefs without fear of suspension.

But in all other leagues, the referees who refuse to follow the rules will be under the gun, starting Sunday.

Tie Gets Runners Into Second Spot

By The Canadian Press

Phoenix Roadrunners managed only a 2-2 tie with Toronto Toros in Phoenix Friday night, but it was good enough to move them into sole possession of second place in the World Hockey Association's Western Division, three points behind Houston Aeros.

In Winnipeg meanwhile, the Jets romped to a 6-1 win over third place Edmonton Oilers to consolidate their hold on second place in the Canadian Division.

The Roadrunners salvaged the tie when Lauri Mononen's second-period goal erased a 2-1 lead by the Toros whose goalie, Mario Vien, turned aside 40 shots.

Jeff Jacques and Frank Mahovlich each scored in the first period for Toronto, and Garry Larivierre scored for Phoenix to make it 2-1 at the end of the same period.

Does Mood Matter?

You'll have to wait until after tonight's Western Canada Hockey League game at Memorial Arena to see if Victoria Cougars appreciate New Westminster Bruins' mood.

Thanks to a 5-3 Friday victory over Lethbridge Broncos, the Bruins weren't expected to be "snarly" when they arrived in Victoria.

"I hadn't given it much thought," said Cougar coach Pat Ginnell, "but I suppose the Bruins might not be as snarly as they would have been if they lost."

Regardless of mood, Ginnell anticipates a "tough game" in Cougars' first encounter of the season with New Westminster. The teams go right back at it again Sunday in New Westminster.

Tonight's game will be the fourth in as many days for Bruins. Friday's triumph was their second in three Alberta starts, and lifted Buins three points ahead of second-place Kamloops Chiefs in the Western Division.

The Buins outshot Lethbridge 27-20 despite picking up 10 of 16 penalties and three of five majors.

Kamloops lost ground by playing Saskatoon Blades to a 5-5 tie in Saskatoon. Dave Hathaway's goal at 17:41 of the final period salvaged the point for Kamloops.

Visitors Topped In Two Contests

The host St. Michael's University School captured two of the three exhibition rugby games played Friday against Edmonds Junior High of Burnaby.

St. Michael's won the under-16 contest 8-6 and the under-14 game 21-0. Edmonds squeezed out a 9-8 decision in the under-15 contest.

Vic High Takes Volleyball Lead

There was one close call Friday as Victoria High grabbed the lead after starting in defence of the title in the Vancouver Island high school girls' volleyball championship.

Playing on their home courts, the Vic High girls breezed to victories over Port Alberni, Oak Bay and Courtenay, but they had to work hard for a 15-8, 9-15, 15-7 triumph over Mount Douglas to take it four straight victories.

After opening-day action in the eight-team, round-robin tournament, the Vics are the only undefeated squad with Oak Bay in second place after winning three of four games Friday.

Following the Bays are Spectrum and Courtenay, both with 2-1 records; Campbell River (1-2), Mount Douglas and Belmont (1-3) and Port Alberni (0-3).

Connors in Final

LONDON (AP) — Americans Jimmy Connors and Eddie Dibbs moved into the final of the Dewar Cup tennis tournament Friday, and Dibbs made a big stride toward winning a place in the Masters tournament. Connors outlasted his doubles partner, Ilie Nastase of Romania, 6-3, 4-6, 6-1 Friday night. Earlier, Dibbs beat Buster Mottram of Britain 6-3, 6-3.

Dibbs, by reaching the final, earned 45 points in the Grand Prix standings and moved nearer to a place in the top eight, which would mean an automatic berth in the Masters starting Nov. 30 at Stockholm.

Dibbs is fighting for the last place with Adriano Panatta of Italy and Jaime Fillol of Chile, who are both playing in a Grand Prix tournament at Buenos Aires this week.

OKKER OUSTED

HONG KONG (AP) — Tom Okker of Holland and Australia's John Newcombe were eliminated by United States players in quarter-final upsets at a $50,000 tennis tournament Friday.

Tom Gorman defeated Okker 6-4, 6-4 and Brian Gottfried beat Newcombe 6-3, 4-6, 6-3 to advance into the semi-finals.

In other quarter-final singles matches, Mexico's Raul Ramirez beat Spain's Juan Gisbert 7-5, 6-0, and American Alex Mayer defeated Australian Bob Carmichael 6-4, 8-6.

University of Victoria Vikings took the inside track to a resounding victory in the opening game of the Canada West University Athletic Association men's basketball league Friday night at the McKinnon gym.

UVic Vikettes went to their bench with the same result in the first game of the CWUAA women's league.

The victims were Lethbridge Pronghorn men's and women's teams.

The Vikings, first-place finishers last season, dumped Lethbridge 99-54 while the Vikettes waltzed to a 67-28 triumph.

In two other games on the UVic campus Friday, Viking Jayvees got 19 points from Ben Shotton and 18 from Tom Watson for a 67-65 win over B.C. Institute of Technology while Twyla Moser scored 14 points to lead Vikette Jayvees to a 69-51 triumph over BCIT.

Vikings started slowly, falling behind 9-6 in the first five minutes, but once they found a way of cracking the Pronghorn defence, it was all over.

"We got inside on them," Viking coach Gary Taylor explained. "We're planning to play that way this season."

UVic led 40-26 by the intermission, ran in 22 straight points while outscoring Lethbridge 24-6 in the third quarter, then pumped in 35 points in the last 10 minutes.

Lorne Dakin and Robbie Parris played the leading roles for the Vikings. Dakin led both teams in scoring with 24 points and Parris, playing an outstanding floor game, set him up for the majority of them. Late in the game, Parris stole the ball on two successive plays.

But what really pleased Taylor was the Vikings' defensive work and the way his newcomers performed, particularly after he inserted them in the last 10 minutes. He singled out Chris Hebb and Tim McGovern for special commendation.

"Chris handled himself well and Tim did what we had been working on all week," said Taylor. "He was aggressive under the boards."

Vikings used their height advantage to dominate the boards at both ends of the floor.

Lauren Edlund was the only Pronghorn to hit double figures. He had 11 points. Vikings held Lethbridge star Phil Letham to seven points. He suffered a groin injury in a late-game tumble but is expected to play tonight when the two teams resume rivalry at the McKinnon Building at 8:30.

The Vikettes, who play Lethbridge again tonight at 6:30 at the McKinnon gym, got what coach Mike Gallo described as "her best game ever" from Marg Mainwaring. She led both teams in scoring with 14 points and in rebounds with nine.

"I'm very happy with the depth we showed," Gallo said. "For example, Ronni Hind came off the bench tonight and ran in eight points in a row. Lorraine Mosher and Leslie Godfrey also were outstanding."

Alberta won a pair of CWUAA games against UBC in Edmonton Friday, the Golden Bears edging the Thunderbirds 58-57 in men's play and the Pandas beating the Thunderettes 59-43 in a women's game.

Calgary and Saskatchewan managed a split in other opening-day action. Calgary's Dinosaurs erupted for 40 points in the second half to defeat Saskatchewan Huskies 87-54 in men's play while the Huskiettes trounced Calgary Dinnies 73-43 in womens action at Saskatoon.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Steady effort in B.C. Hydro League at Town and Country Lanes has produced men's fivepin award for Ed Scott in annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest. Scott toppled pins for 274-318-280-872 series to pace men's fivepin division in sixth week of 26-week event.

Jeers For McKenny Turn Into Applause

"We're not allowed to drop-pass in the attacking zone. I was in pretty deep, Sittler was in good position and the only way I could get the puck to him was to zing it off the posts."

A sense of humor is helpful to a player whose career as a National Hockey League defenceman happened to coincide with that of Bobby Orr, although the Toronto management has not always been appreciative of McKenny's one-liners.

But everyone has been chuckling this season, even though the handsome Ottawa native has been hitting more than his share of goal posts, having acquired what he modestly describes as a "blacksmith's touch around the net."

Filling a vacancy created by the sudden retirement of Ron Ellis, McKenny has become an instant success as a right winger and the abuse directed at him from the stands of Maple Leaf Gardens has turned into applause.

"It's all pretty heady stuff," said the eight-year veteran. "I can't really believe it's for me. I think it's really for Sittler or Borie Salming. I just intercept a little for my personal use."

Until Ellis bowed out a few days before the season opened, McKenny's days as a Leaf appeared numbered. At 28, he was one of the oldest defenceman in camp and the Leaf management had expressed a preference for blue-liners more inclined to thump an incoming forward into the boards.

"I knew at the end of last season that Leafs would try to trade me," said McKenny, who prefers skating and stick-handling to the heavy work in the corners. "But I knew that with my age and contract in the picture, they would have a tough time unloading me. In fact, I felt a little sorry for the team because they seemed to be stuck with me."

Then he moved to right wing on a line with Sittler and they hit it off immediately.

The resulting acclaim has left McKenny unimpressed.

"I don't think I'm playing any better and I'm certainly not an exceptional winger," he said. "I figured I was doing pretty well for six years on defence and I liked the anonymity I had back there."

He suggested that playing with Sittler had a great deal to do with his effectiveness.

"He carries the puck a lot and he's so damned good and strong that the other team needs two men to stop him. That leaves a hole for me."

Sittler was quick to return the compliment when asked about McKenny as a linemate.

"He has a great sense of where everyone is on the ice," said the Leaf captain. "He doesn't have to look, he just knows. His moves are so good you have to react very quickly to anticipate them."

McKenny emphatically rejects any suggestion that his quips indicate a lack of seriousness in his approach to hockey.

Burden Double Winner

EDMONTON (CP)— Willie Burden of Calgary Stampeders, the Western Football Conference nominee as outstanding player in the Canadian Football League, received two conference awards Friday night.

Burden was given the Jeff Nicklin Memorial Trophy as most valuable player and the Eddie James Trophy as outstanding rusher.

The awards were announced at a news conference in conjunction with the sudden-death WFC final here Sunday between Edmonton Eskimos and Saskatchewan Roughriders.

Burden covered 1,897 yards on 332 attempts this season, bypassing a record set in 1961 by Earl Lunsford, who played that season for Calgary. He also surpassed a record of 323 carries in one season, set by Sakatchewan's George Reed this year.

Burden and Johnny Rodgers of Montreal Alouettes are the finalists for the outstanding player award in the CFL.

Also honored with WFC awards Friday were defensive end Bill Baker of British Columbia Lions, outstanding lineman; linebacker Larry Cameron of British Columbia, outstanding rookie; Dave Cutler of Edmonton, who won the Dave Dryburgh Trophy as scoring champion; wide receiver Tom Forzani of Calgary, outstanding Canadian; and offensive tackle Charlie Turner of Edmonton as top offensive lineman.

Tenpin Tourney To Finish Sunday

Competition resumed at noon today and continues through Sunday in the B.C. Tenpin Association men's bowling tournament at Mayfair Lanes.

Doubles and singles events continue at 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Sunday and the team event resumes at 1 p.m.

Bechtold Boys Serving Legion

Gary Bechtold scored three goals and his brother John, who also is gaining a reputation as a pitcher in the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League, added a pair Friday as the Legion dropped Fuller Lake Flyers 10-2.

Kevin Kennedy also scored twice while Jim Entzminger, Jerry Lindall and Murray Allen added one for Legion, which led 5-0 and 7-0 after the first two periods.

Rogers' Glory Shared by Boss

OTTAWA (CP) — Montreal Alouettes owner Sam Berger may be 75 years old but he walked away from the Eastern Football Conference's awards luncheon here Friday with the Jeff Russell Memorial Trophy as the EFC's most valuable player.

The trophy was actually won by his superstar, Johnny Rodgers, but Rodgers, after thanking the league for the award, said he wanted to give it to Berger for giving him his start in the league three years ago.

Rodgers won the award last year. He said he hoped to go "one step further this year" and win the Schenley Trophy as the Canadian Football League's most valuable player.

Rodgers was set to lead his team-mates into today's EFC championship game against Ottawa Rough Riders. The luncheon was part of festivities leading up to the game.

Two Riders also received awards. Jim Foley, who has worked as halfback and receiver this year, was awarded the Lew Hayman Award as the outstanding Canadian in the EFC.

Quarterback Tom Clements, who guided the Riders to first place in the EFC this year, received the Frank M. Gibson Award as the EFC's rookie of the year.

Dave Braggins of Montreal got the Leo Dandurand Award as the outstanding offensive lineman in the EFC while Jim Corrigall of Toronto Argonauts won the EFC's outstanding defensive lineman laurels, the James P. McCaffrey Award.

The five will represent the east in the Schenley Awards race to be announced in Calgary prior to the Grey Cup Nov. 23.

Scorpions Shoot For First Berth

Victoria Scorpions hit the road this weekend in a bid to take over first place in the Dogwood Senior "A" Men's Basketball League.

Scorpions, boasting a 2-2, won-lost record, play Vancouver A's tonight and again Sunday afternoon on the mainland. A sweep would propel Victoria to the head of the closely-knit class. Only two points separate the five teams.

A's boosted their record to 2-2 Thursday with a 102-101 squeaker over North Shore Mountaineers while in an earlier game this week, Burnaby Bullets downed Vancouver Capilanos 99-80.

Standing:

	P	W	L	F	A	Pts
Burnaby	4	3	1	373	344	6
Vancouver Caps	6	3	3	464	478	6
VICTORIA	4	2	2	362	362	4
Vancouver A's	4	2	2	394	383	4
North Shore	4	2	4	588	614	4

Next game: Tonight — VICTORIA vs. Vancouver A's.

Don't Joke About Wilkie

EDMONTON (CP) — John Payne of Saskatchewan Roughriders made a mild attempt at humor Friday night and struck Ray Jauch of Edmonton Eskimos in a tender spot.

The rival head coaches spoke briefly at a news conference during a ceremony to honor the individual award-winners in the Western Football Conference this season.

The entire affair, as expected, was casual until Payne responded to a question by suggesting in jest that "it would be nice" if the Saskatchewan defence could force Tom Wilkinson, Edmonton's field general, out of Sunday's WFC sudden-death final before the finish.

Most agreed Payne was paying tribute to Wilkinson's ability, but Jauch evidently didn't see it that way. He insisted the best club should represent the Western Conference in the Grey Cup final at Calgary next weekend and said he doesn't want to see any player injured.

Jauch also said he hopes the best quarterback—either Wilkinson or Ron Lancaster of Saskatchewan—is fit for the final. In each of the last two Grey Cup finals, Edmonton has been defeated after Wilkinson was injured.

Wilkinson has made little of the fact that Saskatchewan defensive coach Don Eddy said earlier this week that Wilkinson could not stand up to a rush as intense as the one Ralph Brock of Winnipeg Blue Bombers survived without injury last week.

Wilkinson has had rib, chest, back and nose injuries this season and has been reported suffering sore back muscles and injured ribs as he prepares for the final.

"I'm supposed to be injury-prone but I don't think I am," said Wilkinson. "In a game like this and the Grey Cup, if we should get there, the hitting is harder.

"I'm not sitting around thinking I might get hurt. You just can't think like that."

It Was Just Friendly Fuss

By The Canadian Press

"It was just a friendly National Basketball Association scuffle, soon to be forgotten," said Dick Gibbs of Buffalo Braves.

The capacity crowd at the Milwaukee Arena won't forget. And there's a sneaky suspicion neither will Milwaukee Bucks.

"I was filling the lane on a fast break when (Gary) Brokaw stepped in front of me," Gibbs said. "I didn't appreciate that so I threw him out of the way."

Brokaw's version was a little different: "We were coming down the court and exchanged elbows. He hit me. It felt like a punch. So I hit him."

That's when Milwaukee's Bobby Dandridge got into the act, followed shortly afterwards by the Bucks' general manager, six-foot-eight, 280-pound Wayne Embry.

"I was just trying to protect Brokaw," Dandridge said of his tackling Gibbs. "I'm just glad nobody got hurt. We just fell over the table. There were no punches exchanged."

When the fourth-quarter brawl was over, Buffalo went on to defeat Milwaukee 112-98, snapping a five-game Bucks' winning streak.

In other NBA games Friday night, Philadelphia defeated Boston 119-109, Atlanta clipped Washington 97-88, Portland downed Chicago 93-89, Los Angeles stopped Phoenix 114-107 and Seattle edged Cleveland 100-97 in overtime.

In the American Basketball Association, St. Louis beat Virginia 106-102, Denver downed Kentucky 117-111 and Indiana beat Utah 127-119.

No fouls, technical or otherwise, were called in connection with the Milwaukee-Buffalo brawl. No players were ejected and officials called a jump ball to resume play.

OWNERS AGREE TO ARBITRATION

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Major league baseball team owners agreed Friday to allow arbitration to proceed in the case of two players seeking to become free agents.

The players are Andy Messersmith of the Los Angeles Dodgers and Dave McNally of the Montreal Expos.

The owners had filed suit in U.S. District Court for an injunction against arbitration proceedings. They contend that the issue of a player becoming a free agent is not a proper subject for arbitration under terms of the collective bargaining agreement between the owners and the Major League Baseball Players Association.

Last week, Judge John W. Oliver asked the owners and the players association, which represents Messersmith and McNally, to agree to a stipulation that the arbitration proceed as scheduled.

Lead Shared

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Hollis Stacey sank a 20-foot uphill putt on the final hole Friday to tie veteran Sandra Post for the first-round lead in the Ladies Professional Golf Association's $50,000 Lady Jacksonville Open.

Miss Post, formerly of Oakville, Ont., and now living in Florida, and Miss Stacy, now in her second year on the tour, had two-over-par 74s to take a one-shot lead over Sandra Haynie and Kathy McMullen.

A field of 82 pro and nine amateur golfers battled high winds and low temperatures on the 6,300-yard Selva Country Club course. The temperature was near freezing and the winds were blowing at 25 m.p.h. when the first group teed off.

Jocelyne Bourassa of Shawinigan, Que., and all-time leading LPGA money-winner Kathy Whitworth headed a group of nine players at 76, two shots off the pace.

Hoop Workshop

Brush up on your basketball knowledge.

That's the opportunity to be offered at a workshop to be held at Belmont Secondary School next Thursday. Arranged by Belmont Braves' coach Bill Spotswood, the clinic will hold benefits for teachers who run physical education programs as well as for minor league coaches.

Speakers will include provincial director Bill McAllister; provincial coach John Olsen; former Simon Fraser University coach John Kootnekoff; Victoria referee Martin Adams, and University of Victoria coaches Mike Gallo and Tom Hatcher.

Close Call for Nats

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — John Cassidy of Halifax hit for two free throws in the final 15 seconds Friday night to lead the Canadian national basketball team to a 65-63 victory over Niagara University in an exhibition game.

The Canadian team, headed for the 1976 Olympics, led most of the way as they won their first game on a 10-game swing against U.S. collegiate teams.

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

Grief Slowly Brings Its Own Wisdom

By Rev. J. A. Davidson

A few months after his wife died, C. S. Lewis, the English literary scholar and lay theologian, wrote this in a letter to a friend: "I am learning a great deal. Grief is not, as I thought, a state but a process, like a walk in a winding valley which gives you a new landscape every few miles."

Some of you may now be passing through that winding valley. Others may have had recent encounters with grief. And all of you will experience the grief of bereavement at some times during your lives.

Grief begins with shock — and the shock contines for a time, in varying degrees of intensity. You have feelings of unreality, of inner numbness, of emotional dryness. This is the almost inevitable first reaction. And we should be thankful for it, for it does give us some respite from hard reality: someone has called it "nature's gentle anaesthesia".

The initial shock is followed, often rather quickly, by a whirlpool of strong, painful feelings — feelings of confusion of isolation, of unfocussed hostility, sometimes of guilt and remorse and resentment. It is only when you accept these feelings that you are able to move through them, and they are quite normal and should not be considered signs of emotional weakness.

Do not be afraid to express your grief feelings. Big boys and big girls should cry sometimes. Of course, ostentatious expressions of grief, expressions of grief merely for show, are rarely helpful — but never hold back from expressing your grief honestly and openly. In grief situations the quivering lip is generally far more honest and far more wholesome than an affected stiff upper lip.

It is not easy to accept the death of a person whom you have loved and to deal with the strong feelings of grief. Most people need from three to six months to come to terms with such a loss.

It is generally best for the grief-stricken if they try to back to their ordinary pattern of life as soon as possible. Studies of grief indicate that it can rarely be handled by idle, inert mourning, and that it is usually assuaged and softened by purposeful activity. Tennyson, after the death of his friend, Arthur Hallam, wrote, "I must lose myself in action, lest I wither in despair." For most of us, the longer we spend in idle grief the longer it will take us to rise above our grief.

But there can be no rushing of the grief-process. It does take time. It entails walking on a rough road through a winding valley, not driving easily on a freeway. In his widely-read book of some years ago, Peace of Mind, Rabbi Joshua Liebman commented on what he called "grief's slow wisdom": we must always respect "grief's slow wisdom", both in our own grief and in the grief of others.

In 1974, he led an Evangelistic team through the British Isles and has preached throughout Europe and South America.

An author, educator, and radio-television and film personality, Dr. Sweeting serves as editor-in-chief of Moody Monthly, a Christian family magazine of more than 250,000 circulation. CNIB Has 'Totally Failed' To Help Blind: Report

VANCOUVER (CP) — A report to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind on the unmet needs of blind British Columbians says the CNIB has totally failed in providing vocational training programs.

The author of the report, Dr. Linda Headley, herself was blinded by diabetes and had to forgo a career in dentistry as a result.

Her report is part of a Canada-wide survey on their needs. The federal government requested it be undertaken by the CNIB in connection with approval of the institute's government grants and a national report is to be released in January, 1976.

In her assessment of the CNIB in B.C., Dr. Headley says the organization "must undergo a major metamorphosis" if it is to play a role in the movement towards equality for the blind.

"Not only must it improve many of its programs, it must also totally change its philosophy from a negative putdown attitude towards the blind to one of positive optimism regarding the capabilities of its clients," says the report.

About 3,800 blind persons in B.C. are clients of the CNIB. Sixty-five per cent are older than 65, about 1,200 or 30 per cent are between 16 and 65, while the rest are under 16.

In compiling her report, Dr. Headley drew upon information provided by more than 400 letters she received in the course of her study.

"There is very little evidence that existing agencies do much of anything to encourage blind people ... to develop their employment skills," wrote one respondent in reply to a letter Dr. Headley sent to all blind persons in the province.

Frank Hunter, president of the B.C. Association of Concerned Handicapped, was blinded 25 years ago and says training and employment of the blind have been lacking. He says the attitude of society and of employers is the big problem and that governmets and private charities need to set an example by hiring the blind whenever possible.

Hunter says the CNIB needs to educate the public about the problems faced by the blind instead of fostering the image of a person walking around with a white cane and tin cup.

Dr. Headley's report says as far as could be ascertained there are no vocational training programs for the blind in B.C.

"Operating a candy or cigarette booth or making brooms or baskets is not good enough says one of the letters received by Dr. Headley.

Her report says two-thirds of the 16-to-65 age group are "receiving social welfare assistance or are otherwise supported through family or institutional sources to supplement their blind pension, and have annual incomes which come close to the poverty line."

A recent blind workmen's compensation study estimates that there is a 45-per-cent unemployment rate among the blind in B.C. and that of those persons employed, about one-third work for the CNIB.

Art MacNaughton, director of the B.C. and Yukon division of the CNIB, says Canada Manpower should take over the job of looking after employment for blind persons.

"I don't think the CNIB of employees when in fact it should be in the employment field," says MacNaughton, adding that with no alternative, an imperfect job is better than none at all.

Hunter says: "The CNIB thinks of itself as a manager is not an employer primarily but an organization designed to give service to the blind.

"The fact that it is legally permitted to pay less than minimum wages to its blind workers would indicate it wants a pool of cheap labor and prefers not to have the blind working out in the community."

MacNaughton notes that workers are paid at piecework rates and officials say the work is considered of therapeutic rather than intrinsic economic value.

The compensation study says "There are no general income and employment statistics for the handicapped or the blind in B.C." and "the CNIB also does not maintain sufficient statistical data from which to properly evaluate the economic and employment situation of the B.C. blind population."

Like any other organization, the CNIB has been feeling the pinch of inflation.

MacNaughton says more money must be raised to meet inflationary pressures but, unlike a business concern, the CNIB can't increase the price of its services because it is not a commercial undertaking.

Industrial Profits Still Slide

OTTAWA (CP) — Total industrial profits continued their 15-month downward slide in the third quarter of the year, Statistics Canada reported Thursday.

Although total third-quarter sales were up 9.5 per cent from the third quarter of 1974, net income after taxes was down 9.6 per cent.

The drop in over-all industrial profits resulted from an 11.5-per-cent drop in mining, a 14.6-per-cent drop in manufacturing and a 1.3-per-cent rise in the protits of other industries.

Total profits for all industries reached a peak of $2.574 billion in the second quarter of 1974. Since then, quarterly profits have been down from the comparable previous year's profits.

The 1975 third-quarter profits for all industries totalled $2.024 billion, down from $2.238 billion for the same period last year. Sales totalled $51.53 billion, up from $40.043 billion.

Sales in the manufacturing industries totalled $24.718 billion, up 6.9 per cent from $23.12 billion in the third quarter of 1974. Manufacturing profits were $1.006 billion, down 14.6 per cent from $1.178 billion.

RELIC, CABLES PROP FRANCO

MADRID (UPI) — Public debate raged today about whether Generalissimo Francisco Franco should be kept alive artificially and one Madrid newspaper implored, "enough." Franco was reported resting in "the gravest" condition.

On the 29th day of his medical crisis, machines at La Paz Hospital were helping Franco breathe, keeping his heartbeat steady, supporting his blood pressure and providing the kidney function following his third emergency surgery in 11 days.

Medical advisers said Franco, 82, was resting without accident or incident in his post-operative course, but "the prognosis remains the gravest."

Hundreds of Spaniards gathered outside the hospital. They shouted encouragement to his wife. Some brought flowers. Others gave "A-positive" blood, his type. A provincial priest turned up with another allegedly miracle-working relic for his room.

Newspapers brought into the open the debate that Spaniards have been waiting for the past week whether the man who has led them for 36 years should be kept alive when the ultimate outcome is apparent.

"Franco's life depends only on some cables, some machines, some artificial energies and, of course, providence," said Nuevo Diario. "Seeing his long, tremendous and hair-raising agony, you would like to shoub 'My God, enough'."

Said the newspaper ABC: "Does the resistance of a human organism have limits? Can medicine continue to prolong the life of these indefinitely? The whole of Spain ... is asking these and other questions, without any hope awaiting the predictable end."

The editorial comment in the two newspapers climaxed a week that saw Franco's 32-man medical team battle with everything at its disposal to keep his body functioning.

The latest surgery, to patch up the ruptured remnant of his stomach, required more than 11 pints of transfused blood, bringing the total for his month-long crisis to 120 pints — enough to replace his body content 10 times over.

Medical consultants said his weight dwindled to 80 pounds as compared with 110 when he was first confined with the flu Oct. 17.

YOUTH VERSUS AGE

The Dutch Chess Federation in 1973 arranged a double round match between its youthful chess masters and a group of its members over 60. Age lost out by the score of 9-11. On board one, Dr. Max Euwe, 72-year-old president of the International Chess Federation and ex-World Champion, beat his young opponent, 25-year-old International Master Hans Ree, in the first game and drew the second game. UNDERRATED DEFENCE

The Alekhine Defence feted its entry into chess competition in 1921, three years before the founding of the International Chess Federation. It has appeared three times in matches for the world title. In 1935, Euwe applied it against its originator, Alkehine, and, much more recently, Bobby Fischer used it twice in his match against Boris Spassky. It was won once by Black; the other two games ended in draws.

It was used in the last USA-West Germany match:

The Who Pull a Fast One

By DAVE MARSH

ROLLING STONE

The Who by Numbers is billed as a return to simplicity and the basic values of rock on the part of the group which popularized rock opera. But, altough the synthesizer which dominated Who's Next, Quadrophenia and the soundtrack to Ken Russell's Tommy has been discarded here in favor of basic guitar-bass-drums tracks, The Who By Numbers is both as complicated and as conceptual as either of composer Peter Townsend's operas. It does not have the continuity offered by the operas, of course, but that just means the listener has to work proportionately harder to get the point.

Even the musical simplicity of this album is deceptive. The increased use of acoustic guitar is the most immediately noticeable difference between this and other Who records. Townshend also features ukulele and banjo on a single song each, and in the background of "Blue, Red and Grey," the prettiest, most understated song The Who have done recently, muted French horns add depth. Much of the rest is patented Who guitar-and-drum explosiveness, but recorded with more restraint and played more conventionally than this unorthodox group has managed previously.

The best songs on The Who By Numbers ("However Much I Booze," "They Are All in Love," "How Many Friends") combine the eloquence and power of the Who's Next period with newfound grace. This has always been a most inelegant band — they've learned while playing, and it has showed — but now, they seem almost like normal musicians, without losing the amateurish zest which made them fascinating in the first place. If there is a problem, it is that Peter Townshend's vocals have become so much richer and more spirited than lead singer Roger Daltrey's. Townshend's vocal on "They Are All in Love" is the best on the record.

As for the concept, it is concerned with the nature of rock, the nature of aging, and the nature of stardom. All of these have been Who themes from the beginning ("Hope I die before I get old," Daltrey sang in "My Generation") but I don't think they've ever been expressed so cogently and lucidly. There was something about rock opera which diverted attention from substance to form. Here, where the group has spent so much time pretending to be anti-conceptual, the themes come through in their own time, naturally rather than artifically. Because the music is so vast — you can't take this record in one or two listenings — the lyrics give it renewed depth; as they become clear, it becomes ever more obvious that The Who, always practical jokers, have now pulled the fastest one of all. The work they've sold as trivia is actually one of genius and importance.

TENSION MOUNTS in this scene from Tennessee Williams' searing drama, A Streetcar Named Desire. The play opens at Langham Court Theatre Thursday and will run through to Nov. 29. Robert Price directs the Victoria Theatre Guild production with a cast that includes Judy Bradshaw as the sex-starved Blanche and Susan Goldwater in the sympathetic role of her sister Stella. The gamblers above are, left to right, Michael Woods, Jim Netherton as Stanley, Stella's ruthless husband; Jane Logie, Jim McLellan and Mike Hodgson. Curtain time is 8:15 p.m.

Camosun Theatre to Tour

With a cast composed wholly of students enrolled in the Camosun College theatre arts program, Maurice Harty's production of the Shakespeare comedy Twelfth Night, will be given three public performances — on Friday next and on Nov. 28 and 29 — at Open Space.

Following the public presentation the production will tour schools in Duncan, Nanaimo and other up-island areas.

One of Shakespeare's most popular comedies, Twelfth Night was written to celebrate the twelfth night after Christmas. It combines an ideal romance, Shakespeare's favorite device of hidden identity, frolic, buffoonery and music in a delightful potpourri that is subtitled What You Will.

The settings have been designed by gifted Victorian Anton Gosley, who has recently joined the design staff of CBC television in Vancouver.

The student cast will also perform a children's play on the tour circuit. Titled Mr. Punch at Home, it is based on the loves of the Punch and Judy characters.

"We are not aiming at being a production group," says director Harty. "Rather we are acutely conscious of the realities of the professional theatre. Initially most students on graduation are going to have to work in children's theatre and to tour.

"It is therefore up to us to introduce and to expose them to conditions under which they are liable to make a living. Actors cannot learn the realities of work in the theatre by talking about them. They can only learn by doing."

GALLERY TO SHOW PHOTOS

The Victoria-born camera artist has had his work accepted for the Vancouver Island jury show at Greater Victoria Art Gallery and recently two of his pictures have been published in a book entitled Poetic Reflections of B.C.

Ralph's former chief concern was with landscape subjects but the forthcoming exhibition reflects his artistic progress into the realm of human character and social comment.

Olde England Inn
Inn-Side Talks
With Sam Lane

The Olde England Inn . . . is a dream come true. It had its origin in many wonderful friendships formed by your host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Lane, with Canadians and Americans in the peaceful years before the war, whilst journeying in the highways and by-ways "In Search of England."

Now in its 30th year of operation, established in 1946, Olde England Inn derives its name from Olde England Hotel, situated on the shores of Lake Windermere in the heart of the beautiful Lake District of Northwest England.

A Documentary at Level of Art

A Film Review
By Nora Hutchison

Documentaries are a difficult mode of film expression for theatrical audiences and film distributors to deal with. Audiences are suspicious of the form — can a documentary really be worth the hassle of a trip to the theatre and the price of admission? Opposition, too, from the distributor, whose only interest is in box-office profits, can be a formidable challenge to any filmmaker who wants to make a commercially successful feature-length documentary.

However, Phillipe Mora's film, Brother, Can You Spare A Dime meets the challenge head-on, and achieves considerable success as both an entertainment and a lesson in the social history of America. His great selling point is that although the film rides in on the current wave of nostalgia for the 1930s, its more than just another study of the glitz, glamor and hard times of that decade.

Mora's film is a composite documentary, put together with clips from feature films, newsreel footage and home movies. Much of the original material was discovered by the film's researchers still on nitrate stock or on the negative. Some of the material has never been seen publicly before.

Mora, obviously taken with the images he has compiled, has chosen not to let a traditional narrative intrude. The images are accompanied only by the period's song-hits, sound clips from movies, and original recordings of political speeches. However, his decision to omit a central narrator is the film's crisis. Mora knows the chronology of the clips but we do not, and it's crucial to our comprehension of the film that we be able to distinguish between what we think is newsreel footage, for example, and what was an inspired piece of editing by a studio filmmaker.

Mora characterizes the decade as an age of freneticism. The market crashes, a giant ticker-tape machine explodes, and Wall Street skyscrapers melt like Dali watches. The banks close, newsreels record the long breadlines, and King Kong wrecks New York. Ginger Rogers swings a cape of coins over her shoulders and sings "We're In The Money", in the 1933 edition of The Gold Diggers, and Franklin Roosevelt proclaims in his first Inaugural Address that "The only thing we have to fear is fear itself."

Newsreel clips show marathon dancers dragging their sleeping partners across the dance floor — the 30s' particular way of finding relief and amusement in the bizarre. Later, Paul Revere rides across the sky and wakens America to a new-found optimism with the cry "We're out of the red", in a movie called Stand Up and Cheer.

There are saddening interviews with farmers who've lost their land to drought or floods, and shots of children being tied into face masks, and then released from school early to beat the dust storm home. There are shots of John Dillinger's body in a morgue and an interview with his father, a thin, tiny man, who looks straight into the camera and says, "I tried to raise him right."

There are vigilante groups packing sawed-off shot guns, photographed outside their closed-down factories. They fire indiscrimiately at passing cars, and sometimes, in a frenzy, they turn their guns on each other.

The movie is full of images that are passionate, sober, hilarious and revealing about a people who could laugh uproariously at the sight of a sailor bouncing cannon balls off his belly, become frantic with suspicions of Communist plots, and vote for a government that brought the nation closer to socialism than at any time before or since.

Mora's film is reportage raised to the level of art, but a little more information for the audience would have raised it much higher. The lack of a clear narrative blunts the film's impact. With all the research and scholarship that went into the film's impact, With all the research and scholarship that went into the film's impact. With all the research and scholarship that production, it would seem that Mora should think it necessary to identify the clips, to distinguish newsreel and documentary footage from stage footage. Shots identified by date, place and figures involved, would have put the events into perspective, and furthered our sense of the social history of those years.

Phillipe Mora's film is more than an abstract college, and much more than a grimly amusing game of "name that personality, guess that events." It's just a pity that we have to work so hard to find that out.

SYMPHONY ARTIST

Hailed in Europe as a foremost Canadian piano virtuoso, Marek Jablonski will be the next soloist to appear with Laszlo Gati and the Victoria Symphony.

Concerts in which Jablonski will perform Liszt's Piano Concerto No. 1 and Hungarian Fantasie for piano and orchestra, will take place Nov. 23 and 24 at the Royal Theatre.

Top European commentators have spoken particularly of his nobility of expression, powerful tone and broad technical skills. The Polish-born artist is also noted as being a Chopin player of distinction.

Also on the program is Mozart's Symphony No. 36 in C, K 425, and Brahms' No. 2 in D.

A CBC crew will be on hand to tape the Mozart and Liszt numbers for later broadcast. Actual dates will be Dec. 5 at 9:03 p.m. on AM and Dec. 14 at 4:03 p.m. on FM.

Monday's concert is virtually sold out but there are still some fairly good seats available for Sunday's.

Canada Music Week To Involve Thousands

The 16th successive year of celebrating Canada Music Week begins Nov. 23.

A Dominion-wide project, it involves thousands of people. Canadians are urged to participate by preparing and performing special music during that week.

Victoria Branch of the B.C. Registered Music Teachers' Association will highlight the celebration with a recital to be held Nov. 29 at 9 p.m. at St. Matthias Church Hall, Richardson at Richmond.

Tickets for this event will be available at the door, adult admission $1 students 50 cent.s

Among the purposes of the week say the organizers is to applaud Canadian musicians, to salute the great masters of the past and become acquainted with Canadian composers; also to pay tribute to the music teachers of Canada.

The RMT recital will illustrate these purposes as various city studios will be represented and there will be emphasis on Cnaadian music as well as works from the classical repertoir.

PLAYERS PRESENT COMEDY

Once again St. Luke's Players will take to the stage with a script from the pen of gifted British farce-maker, Philip King.

The play, I'll Get My Man, brings back some of the characters from King's well known comedy, See How They Run, which was an earlier St. Luke's success.

The scene once more is a slightly nutty parsonage and the feathery plot concerns a TV star who takes refuge therein to escape the hordes of matrimony-minded women.

Included in the cast are Lynn and Dennis Kershaw, Joan Tremayne, Monica Jarvis, George Baker, Ed Rowley, Angie Pietarinen and Phyl and Ted Gaskell. Director is Adrian Jarvis.

Curtain time is 8:15 and tickets at the door are priced at $2 for adults and $1 for students and OAPs. On opening night OAPs are admitted for 50 cents.

2 Shows By Greek Dancers

A company of 40 dancers and musicians from the ancient land of Greece comes to McPherson Playhouse to give two performances Wednesday.

The Parthenon Dancers perform authentic Greek folk dances with up-to-date professionalism accompanied by a wide range of instruments and adorned in colorful costumes.

In Greece dance has always been a simple and natural part of everyone's life, and it is from such traditions that revolutions in modern dance have come. This company bridges the treasured songs and dances of earliest Greece with the brisk clarity of today's music and dance.

Dances are from Macedonia, Epirus, Aegean Isles, Corfu, Crete, Thessaley Dodecanese Isles, Thrace, Cyprus, and from a variety of Taverna or Greek eating, drinking and meeting places.

Performances will be at 6 p.m. and 8:45 p.m.

Checktronics For Disabled

OTTAWA (CP) — Thanks to an electronic game called checktronics, seven-year-old Jonathan Burgess can play checkers.

Jonathan has cerebal palsy, which results in defective co-ordination caused by damage to the part of the brain that controls movement.

"As far as I know, this is the first game available to these kids," says Collette Cote, who has been testing it for the Ottawa Crippled Children's Treatment Centre.

"We've been using it here for a month-and-a-half and we're really impressed. The kids love it and many of their parents would like to have a game at home. Unfortunatley, it seems too expensive for that right now."

Miss Cote says children with cerebral palsy have normal intelligence and, although they have difficulty speaking, they have a child's need to communicate and to learn.

She says games such as Checktronics help them to develop their potential intelligence.

"Jonathan has known for quite some time how to play checkers but always had to have someone else around to move the pieces. This game gives him the pleasure of being able to do it for himself."

"He can play chess, too, but I doubt that they'll be able to make an electronic version of that."

Checktronics is a portable lighted board, and each square contains yellow lights for red checkers and green lights for the black team. Lights come on when a piece is on a square.

Each square has a number and each player controls a panel that looks like a digital clock with four slowly changing number-dials. By hitting a plate he can stop the dial at a number from one to eight and tell the machine the move he wants to make.

Jonathan Burgess, 7, finds a new game

To make a move — say from square 78 to 53 — the player hits the control plate when the number seven comes up, which freezes it. He hits the panel again when eight comes up, waits for a five and stops it and then stops the three.

A final tap on tht plate tells the machine the move is over, and flashing lights alert the opposing player of the move.

College Exam Score Linked to Income

BALTIMORE (UPI) — There is a direct correlation between family income and a child's performance on college entrance examinations, according to a study by the U.S. College Entrance Examination Board.

The study found that the five per cent of the students surveyed whose annual family income fell below $6,000 scored an average of 373 on the verbal SAT, compared with a 499 average scored by students whose parents earn more than $30,000 annually.

The figures are based on answers supplied by 27,000 Maryland high school seniors who took the scholastic aptitude test last year. The test is used by many private and public colleges to determine admission.

Rich, Dark Fruit Cake

By MARY MOORE

An early bird Christmas Cake baker who is a reader of long standing confidently announced that she had all of my fruit cake recipes from 1955 on and that my 1962 Rich Dark Old-Fashioned Fruit Cake was my best yet.

We thought it was great too but we could be prejudiced.

As you know our 1975 Chrismast Cake was the result of our efforts to economize for you.

This 1962 cake is not economical but it is exceptionally good and if well wrapped and stored will keep for a year.

RICH DARK OLD FASHIONED FRUIT CAKE (1962)

Wet Ingredients: (including sugar)
1 lb. butter (or margarine if necessary)
2¼ c. (approx. 1 lb.) well packed light brown sugar
10 large eggs
½ c.molasses

Dry Ingredients:
3¾ c. sifted all-purpose flour
2 tsp. salt
¼ tsp. ginger
¾ tsp. allspice
¼ tsp. nutmeg
1 tsp. cinnamon

Fruits and Nuts:
2½ lbs. (9 cups) clean dry currants
2¾ lbs. (9 cups) seeded raisins (these pack together a little more than currants so weigh a little more in terms of cups)
½ c. chopped candied pineapple (buy 2 "rings")
½ c. (approx. 3½ oz.) mixed candied peel
½ c. (approx. 3 oz.) sliced red and green (mixed) glace cherries
1½ c. (approx ½ lb.) whole blanched almonds (reserve 24 for top)
½ c. (approx. 2 oz.) broken walnuts
½ c. (approx. 2 oz.) whole pecans.

Cream butter until light, cream in sugar until both are pale and airy. Beat in eggs one at a time, beating well to blend in each one between additions. Add molasses and orange juice. Sift flour and measure then sift it with the salt and spices. To this flour mixture add all of the prepared and measured fruits and nuts. Add flour-fruit-nut-mixture to wet ingredients and stir until thoroughly mixed. Turn into 2 cake pans measuring 8x8x3" (OR use your set of 3-tiered pans OR 3 standard loaf pans) which have been lined with at least 3 thickness of wax paper, brushing top sheet generously with butter. Arrange reserved almonds in pattern on top of cakes. Put large shallow water pan (broiler pan) in bottom of oven throughout baking period, replenishing water if necessary. Bake at 250 deg. Fahr. (very slowly) for 5 to 5½ hours. Remove from pans and cool on racks without removing wax paper. Highly recommended, moist, foolproof, old-fashioned fruit cake which should be made now, wrapped well and kept in cold place.

Welch Medical Report

By DR. WILLIAM J. WELCH

The popular notion that overeating sweets, especially refined sugar such as glucose, fructose and sucrose, causes diabetes is not literally true, but there is now good evidence that if you are genetically diabetes-prone, a high sugar diet can bring it on.

In the western world the average consumption of refined sugar, largely in the form of cookies, soft drinks, candies, cereals and supermarket snacks, has risen from about 85 pounds per year in 1900 to 140 to 150 pounds per year today.

And with this prodigious consumption of sweets, the incidence of diabetes has steadily risen. It is estimated that 15 per cent of adults in the western nations — every fifth or sixth person — is a diabetic.

A recent study by Dr. A. M. Cohen of the Hadassah Medical School in Jerusalem seems to confirm the concept that for those who are genetically prone to diabetes, eating refined sugar can bring on diabetes and cutting down on refined sugar can prevent its onset.

Dr. Cohen compared the incidence of diabetes among Yemenite immigrants to Israel when they were on their traditonal low-sugar diet and again after they had lived in Israel a few years on the same high-sugar diet as other western Jews.

The incidence of diabetes was low among new Yemenite immigrants. Within a few years after immigration to Israel, the incidence of diabetes among Yemenites was as high as amonbg other Israelis.

Subsequently, they fed a "Yemenite diet," containing no refined sugar to experimental animals and compared the incidence of diabetes among them with a comparable group of animals fed on a sugar-containing "western diet."

The only animals which developed diabetes were among those eating the western diet. It was supected that the sugar-containing diet brought on the disease in animals that were genetically diabetes prone.

At the present time there is no way to predict who is genetically prone to diabetes and who is not, even though it is known that heredity is important since there is a family history of diabetes in as many as 50 per cent of the cases. The present estimate is that about one out of every six persons is diabetes prone.

The conclusion, according to Dr. Cohen, is that we must all be careful about the consumption of refined sugars.

The Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Birds don't fall off perches when they're asleep because tendons in their legs lock their toes tightly on the perch. I read that someplace. But my bird, The Bishop, either hasn't read it or, lately anyway, has forgotten it. He's been falling off his perch lately. At night. He doesn't have far to fall, so should I worry about it? Will it hurt him? Should I let him go, or strap him down, or ? — C. V.

DEAR C.V.: The damage done when he hits the bottom would depend on several factors ranging from which point of his anatomy he landed on to the distance from perch to floor. In any event, it's safe to say these sudden stops are hazardous to his health. Actually, his health probably isn't that good anyway, as evidenced by his poor perching performance. Whether his slipping grip can be improved should be determined by his doctor as quickly as possible.

DEAR DR. MILLER: We've installed a big new aquarium with air bubblers on each end. On one end, the bubbles are real tiny; on the other end, they're big. Which is better, or does it make any difference really? — T. N.

DEAR T.N.: The better bubbler produces smaller, more numerous bubbles. The rate at which oxygen and other gasses dissolve in the water depends on the ratio of the surface area of the bubbles to their volume. This ratio increases rapidly when the size of the bubbles is decreased. Or, to recapitulate, smaller bubbles are better . . . It's also a good idea to place the diffuser (the ball emitting the bubbles) near the bottom of the tank to provide the maximum period for the gas (oxygen in particular) diffision through the bubble into the water.

BICYCLE BUILT for one and a half seems to suit Tollock just fine. He hitches a ride on Dick Barnes' rumble seat for a pedal through Toronto streets.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Nobody in this family is young anymore. The youngest is Phineas, a cat. It seems strange, but all the rest of us, including the dog, have heart problems. Phoneas is lucky that he isn't showing any signs. But if he did, what would they be? My husband says he doesn't think he would because he doesn't think they do. Cats have heart trouble, he means. Don't they? — P.K.

DEAR P.K.: Cats can and do have heart disease, but it's often overlooked. The cat who is somewhat sluggish and breathes harder than normal may have a heart condition. A poor appetite and an enlarged abdomen may also indicate heart disease. But any or all the above signs may be found with many, even most, cat diseases unrelated to cardiac conditions. Sudden posterior paralysis (without a history of injury) would be a more dramatic indication of blood vessel blockage and heart problems. We see more feline heart disease today than a decade ago, not because there's more of it but because of increased awareness and improved diagonostic procdures.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Our young dog, Ulysses, gets the best of everything. We plan on having him around for 20 years or more, and money's no object. OK, so we don't feed him table scraps except maybe steak sometimes, but we do give him cat food because he likes it better than dog food. It costs more, but so what? Nothing's too good for him, and we can pay for it. If he gets plenty of protein he's going to live longer and be healthier, right? — R. S.

DEAR R.S.: Continuously meeting the body's requirement for protein is essential and is definitely an aid to longevity. Continuously exceeding the body's requirement for protein does NOT help ensure longevity and, in fact, may have the opposite effect. Body enzyme and other systems work harder in the presence of excess protein and may therefore wear out faster. The ideal diet continually meets the body's protein requirement but does not provide a superabudnacne of protein for the body to have to cope with continuously. The effects of protein shortage are ultimately disastrous and well-known. The effects of a superabundant protein diet may range from indigestion in the very young to kidney overload in the ancient, and others, some yet to be determined, occuring in the interim.

It is difficult to visualize that a quarter of all people ever born are alive today and that every year the world's population increases by 75 million.

The 8-page folder "The Challenge of World Development: Canada's Role" ("Le defi du developpement mondial et le role du Canada") stresses that the people of the world are divided by their financial status. There are about 20 wealthy nations, among them Canada, and over 100 developing countries where most people earn $300 or less per year.

Fortunately, most rich countries set aside part of their revenues to assist the have-not nations. Canada's official development assistance program is planned and carried out by CIDA, The Canadian International Development Agency.

According to the folder, CIDA's annual budget is about $700 million. Some 70 per cent of these funds are used for bilateral assistance, such as helping to pay for projects in specific countries, shipping fertilizers to others or sending skilled Canadians overseas as advisors. The rest of the CIDA funds are for multilateral assistance and channelled throught the United Nations which pools our funds with those of other countries.

However, much remains to be done. The folder explains what you, as an individual can do. Today more than 120 voluntary organizations across Canada are helping people in about 100 developing countries to improve their lives and right now some 8,000 volunteers are working in developing countries. Intriguing Heritage In Hamilton Home elizabeth forbes

Over the years I have visited heritage homes in every province of Canada. Homes that have been preserved or restored as part of the history of the country and that add to our knowledge of early Canada.

None has intrigued or interested me more than Whitehern, home of the McQuestern family in Hamilton, Ontario.

There will be those in Victoria who remember that home. They will also know that until seven years ago McQuestern lived there. Also that the original furnishings, lovingly preserved, remain practically intact and much as the first McQuesterns arranged them well over a century ago.

This dignified, square stone, town house, now included in Hamilton's Civic Square, dominates the southwest corner of Jackson and McNab Streets.

It was built about 1843 by a man named Richard Duggan and bought by Dr. Calvin McQuestern in 1852 for the then princely sum of 800 pounds.

Dr. McQuestern had come up from Boston to join a cousin, John Fisher, who invented the first threshing machines used in Ontario. Together they started one of Hamilton's earliest foundries, where they manufactured stoves for over two decades.

Lavish draperies too, that reflected the extravagant tastes of those long-ago years; also a stained glass window that still spills a pool of color along the banister of the stairs and into the front hall.

The house stands on a double terrace in the midst of a garden that is filled with flowers and shrubs.

There is a carpeting of myrtle, lily of the valley and many laburnum trees planted by a grandson of that first McQuestern (Hon. Thomas B. McQuesterp) who was an ardent garden and park lover.

Against a south wall there are giant sunflowers and lillies that never fade. They were forged in the family foundry many years ago.

After Dr. McQuestern died, his son Louis became the proud owner of Willowbank (as it was first named) and it was his wife Jane who renamed the place Whitehern, after an English residence she had known.

Louis and Jane (Baker) McQuestern had seven children, five girls and two boys.

The girls grew to be attractive young women. The boys became tall, handsome young men. This is quite evident from many family pictures scattered throughout the various rooms.

One son, Calvin, became a well-known Anglican minister. The other, Tom, was a member of the Ontario Legislature. He was also an active member of the Hamilton Parks Board in the 1920s and it was through him that the Royal Botanical Gardens in that city received its start.

Whitehern rises behind impressive iron gates

Good looking and handsome as they were, not one of those seven children ever married.

They lived on in the big house after their parents were gone. They welcomed friend there. Observed anniversaries there, and in turn, died there.

Last of the seven to go was Rev. Calvin McQuestern who was in his mid-90s when he died in 1968. A sister, Hilda Belle, preceded him by only two years.

They had been living in the place under lifetime tenancy as the family had given Whitehern to the city some years before, to be maintained (in perpetuity) as a memorial to the first Calvin McQuestern and his grandson Tom.

A plaque in a corner of the grounds reads as follows: "Home of McQuestern family 1852-1968. Bequeathed to the citizens of Hamilton to be preserved as a period piece. Built of limestone quarried and cut in Hamilton. Classic entrance portico and the careful detail of the memory expresses the taste of prosperous families in the era leading into the 18th, 19th and 20th centuries."

In her last book, A Mountain and a City, the late Marjorie Campbell, Canadian author, give Whitehern what I consider an even better accolade.

She wrote "in its peace and quiet so close to the hurly-burly of Main Street, future citizens — and particularly the children of the future — may have a vision of a vanished world of highly civilized, well-mannered people — a small world perhaps in the 1840s, but nevertheless one that laid the foundation of the city of Hamilton today."

CHAMP Helps Vet's Campaign

OTTAWA (CP) — Bernadette Lefebvre is a 16-year-old student who has had the chance to turn her nearly lifelong handicap into an asset, for both herself and others.

Bernadette lost both legs above the knee in an accident 14 years ago on her parents farm in Bouchette, Que., but she now is walking on artifical limbs with the help of CHAMP, a child amputee program run by the War Amputations of Canada.

On Remembrance Day she was the centre of the war veterans' campaign to publicize the program which Gerry Desbiens, a war amputee and program workers, points to as proof that veterans are not just concerned about those maimed during the two world wars.

Bernadette a strong and tenacious girl and one of five children CHAMP is helping in the Ottawa area, says she wants to brighten other people's lives.

She said she has decided not to train as a bilingual secretary, as she had planned before coming to Ottawa this fall, where she got her new legs.

"Now I want to help kids the way Gerry has helped me." Ihe says she plans to study child psychology at university.

Desbiens said War Amputations of Canada is financed through profits from the sale of key tags and related activities.

He said CHAMP helps any child amputee whose parents cannot afford medical services or provide the compassion it takes to foster determination that handicapped people need to conquer problems.

Bernadette is the 1 only CHAMP member so far who has had to leave home for her medical care and education, he said.

The organization provides Bernadette with expenses money-rent at an apartment she shares with her 18-year-old sister, Isabelle, a car, and other expenses including a piano modified so she can operate the foot pedals.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I work in an office with three other girls. (I am the only one who's Jewish.)

I asked my boss if I could have one day off for the Jewish New Year since this is the holiest of all holy days for me.

He said, "Yes, if you come in on Christmas to make up for it."

He's quite a kidder, but I'm not sure he was kidding.

What do you think?—ROSIE.

DEAR ROSIE: He was probably kidding — unless your office is open on Christmas.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 24-year-old girl who got myself into a mess I can't get out of.

My best girl friend's father (I'll call him "Pops") had a real nice car for sale. I've been out of work for a long time and I needed one, so Pops offered to sell me the car for sex.

I'm not a bad girl, but I figured, for once, why not?

Well, I got the car and the papers, and I gave Pops the first "installments" of sex, and now he's in love with me! (I forgot to mention, he's 52, a widower and in pretty good shape for his age.)

Pop's daughter is leaving her husband because she found out he's gay, and her father offered to let us stay at his house. We're both broke and have no place to go, but I'm afraid if I move in, it will be hard to move out.

Pops has asked me to marry him, which I could never do, but I hate to hurt his feelings. Also, I don't want to spoil the relationship between him and his daughter.

I could sure use some advice.—MESS.

DEAR MESS: Your refusal to marry "pops" should in no way damage the relationship between him and his daughter. DON'T move into his house. He might expect you to pay off the rent the same way you're paying off the car, and you'd be there indefinitely. The advice from here is to get a respectable job, go to work and quit bartering your body.

DEAR ABBY: We own a dog that is always kept on a leash when he's put outside.

Our neighbor has cats that are allowed to roam freely outside and onto our property. They tease our dog, causing him to bark until we put the cats back on their own property.

We have had anonymous phone calls informing us that our dog's barking is disturbing the entire neighborhood. Abby, if those cats didn't tantalize our dog, he wouldn't bark.

What do you suggest we do? We've complained to the cat owners, but they still turn their cats loose on our property.—FUMING.

DEAR FUMING: Tell the cat owners that if their cats are found on your property, you will ring up the local pound. Then follow through. One "cat-astrophe" should do it.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has some relatives who always leave the price tag on gifts they send to us and our children. I just can't understand it. The first thing I do when I buy a gift is to make sure the price tag is removed.

It can't be a coincidence that every gift that comes from these people has the price tag on it. Do you think it could be because they want us to know how much they have spent on us and want us to spend the same amount on them in return? — Curious.

DEAR CURIOUS: I think you've come up with the answer. Ignore the hint and spend what you can afford — and continue to remove the price tags!

U.K. Puts High Priority On New Sport Facilities

LONDON (CP) — An unprecedented boom in construction of sport facilities in the last few years has brought about a change in the attitude of Britons to physical activity.

The building of the multi-sport centres reached its peak in 1974 and nearly 40 now are built, under construction or in various stages of planning.

The project has a high degree of priority in national and local government and plans were prepared in close co-operation with regional bodies set up by the Sports Council.

Spending on public sports facilities in Britain rose last year to an estimated 80 million pounds ($167.8 million), a record.

The drive began when the Sports Council issued a report on indoor centres in February, 1972. The following September, the South Western Sports Council met at Exeter to study problems connected with the design of indoor sports facilities.

The next month, Roger Bannister, then chairman of the Sports Council, launched a Sport for All campaign aimed at encouraging people to take part in sport and improving facilities.

He said equal consideration would be given to creating success at the top, which called for expert coaching and high-level competition. But none of these factors could operate without adequate facilities.

Experience so far has shown that a sports centre acts like a magnet on the community. The demand for recreational facilities of every kind seems to be insatiable.

The basic features of a sports centre are a swimming pool, two squash courts, a sports hall, bar and snack bar and parking facilities. The time it takes to build depends largely on the local authority, but generally it is between 18 months and two years.

The centres vary in size. An example of the larger type is the Pembroke Sports Centre in South Wales, built at a cost of only 280,000 pounds.

Situated on the site of Pembroke School, the centre is intended for use by schools in the area on weekdays and by the public at other times. Its main features are the swimming pool, with a separate learner pool, and the sports hall, which is divided into various areas by movable nets and has a climbing wall and netting for three cricket lanes.

Also shared by the centre and school are the outdoor facilities, which include 12 all-weather tennis courts and rugger and cricket pitches.

Another example of a centre is Chilwell Olympia, one of 10 joint-use sports centres in Nottinghamshire, in the Midlands. Facilities include a main hall, a badminton hall and gymnasium, a small hall and four squash courts.

School children and the public use it for indoor football, fencing, roller skating, badminton, archery, basketball, boxing, judo and table tennis. Outside there are tennis courts and pitches for football, hockey, cricket and rugger.

Nottingham also is the site of the National Water Sports Centre, which provides year-round training and a competition area to international standards for rowing, canoeing and water skiing, with facilities for powerboating, sailing, subaqua training and fishing.

The centre is part of a large country park alongside the River Trent. The area was once derelict gravel pits and the low-cost project was hailed as an imaginative piece of environmental engineering.

Crawley Sportcentre at Crawley New Town, southeast England, has a multi-sports hall and outdoor athletics arena, a floodlit all-season games area and covered swimming pools. It also houses a licensed bar and refreshment lounge, sauna baths and a sports shop.

A Gun in the House Led to Disaster...

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Bill Rosik is serving a life sentence for killing a police officer and it has made him a firm believer in gun control.

Rosik, 28, had a fight with his wife one day in 1970. Within half an hour he had shot three policemen, one of them fatally.

In an interview with The Whig-Standard at Warkworth Institution, a medium-security prison 15 miles northwest of Trenton, Ont., Rosik said that gun control is the only way to prevent a prepeat of his own story.

"A gun is meant for one thing," he said. "The destruction of something, and whoever has a gun in his hand holds the power of death."

On that day in 1970, Rosik had in his home three registered pistols and two shotguns he used for target practice and hunting.

He said his marriage had been going sour and he was having emotional problems. But he insists the fight with his wife would have gone no further if he had been unable to reach for a gun.

Rosik had taken both alcohol and tranquillizers and under the combined influence he picked up a shotgun during the fight.

His wife told him she was going to phone the police.

"I said I would save her the trouble," he said. "I called them and told them to come over, with the hope they might try to straighten things out for us."

The policeman who came to the door had a revolver in his hand. Seeing Roskik's shotgun, he leapt from the porch and ran behind his cruiser. Then Rosik started shooting.

"Many police cars later, bullets were just flying into the house," Rosik said. "It was just unreal, seeing the drapes just buckling and swaying with the lead."

When the shooting was over, one policeman was fatally wounded, another had been shot in his lungs and liver, and a third shot in the face. He lost one eye and had to leave the force.

Convicted of capital murder and sentenced to be hanged, Rosik waited on death row for a year, running through the process of court appeals. All were turned down and finally he helped his mother plan his funeral.

Three weeks later, his death sentence was commuted by the cabinet on the grounds Rosik could be rehabilitated.

But the memories of his crime continue to haunt him.

"I still get little feelings of it now," he said. "Not to the point its nauseating, but now and then, in my cell, on a quiet night, it just comes into my head.

"I just think on what I did. If there was any way I could bring that man back . . .

Rosik said he was not the type of person who should have been allowed to own a gun as he could not control his temper.

Now he would like to see strict controls on the ownership and use of guns. Hunters and members of the pistol clubs should leave their weapons at the club or a police station, he said.

Rosik, who had no previous criminal record before the shooting, said too many people have guns in their homes.

"The house is a bad place as you could flip out or you could have a friend who could flip out.

Having guns at home cost Rosik his marriage, his wife has remarried and labelled him a killer for life.

"A lot of people seem to think it can't happen to them, but it can happen to anyone."

In the interview, Rosik declined to discuss the location or other details of his offence because, he said, he leaves Warkworth on temporary passes and does not want to draw attention to himself.

HIS PET DOUBLE-HEADER

He may be the only kid in the world with one.

The tiny diamond-back terrapin that the boy found in marshes near his home here is "one in a million, a freak of nature," said an expert at the Philadelphia Zoo.

The baby turtle is undersized with a shell only as big as a 25-cent piece, said Stockton State College zoologist Roger Wood.

The eight-year-old boy's mother, Viola Dawson, said the turtle's two heads "make him very awkward."

"He doesn't know which way to go, but he has one dominant head and that head usually wins out."

The turtle currently dwells in a little bowl with some other baby turtles that are normal.

"For the time being it's going to remain a pet," said Wood, a turtle specialist who has asked the family to notify him if they wish to place the turtle in a museum.

Two-headed snakes and lizards occur infrequently in nature, but the turtle is a novelty, both Wood and zoo spokesmen said.

WAITING'S WARM WITH BUS BELL

ST. THOMAS, Ont. (CP) — The city of St. Thomas is testing a bus warning device, the first in Canada.

The gadget, if successful in tests, might be installed in senior citizen projects, apartment buildings, and public buildings to warn people of approaching buses.

Bill Lindsay, general services co-ordinator for the city, came up with the idea about a month ago. He realized the potential for such a device, which might be placed in public lobbies which are already heated so that the bus customers could wait inside.

He was well aware of complaints, especially from the elderly, of waiting for buses in cold weather.

So he approahced Glendale Lite and Electronics to see what kind of electrical apparatus could be used as a bus warning system.

The resulting small box, nine by 12 inches, can easily be erected on a wall of a lobby. A garage-door operating transmitter placed in the buses causes the box to light up and a bell rings as well.

In tests, the range appeared to be about 600 feet.

The drivers would be trained to aid the service by waiting for them to cross the street if necessary.

Lindsay said the city could purchase five or six warning devices for the price of one bus shelter. He expected public resonse to be good, as bus riders would be much warmer waiting in a lobby of a building than in an unheated bus shelter.

Prof., Chaplain Debate Promiscuity

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Good sex is equivalent to a good tennis game and it makes no more sense to go through life with one sex partner than it does to play tennis always with the same person, a Vanderbilt professor argues.

Dr. Robert Ehman debated the positive side of promiscuity with Vanderbilt Chaplain Dr. Beverly Ashbury in a confrontation sponsored by the Undergraduate Philosophy Association.

"I don't think it takes forever to love somebody, and there is no reason to love only one person," Ehman said, adding that sex ought to be "uninhibited, spontaneous and joyous," between two people who have eliminated the possibility of pregnancy and "hurting somebody."

Ashbury said Ehman put sex on the same level as digestion, suggesting that "sexual encounters are like good meals."

"That you can be 'open' with everybody means that you can be 'open' with nobody," he said. Ehman's definition of promiscuous sex, he said, is "a flight to sensation to avoid passion."

"Not to deal with the totality of another person means that the meaning of sex has been lost," the chaplain added.

Ehman contended that "sex is not all that special" or "too good to do" or something that should be saved for special occasions or an exclusive relationship.

He said it was a pleasant sensory experience equivalent to a fine dinner in a fancy restaurant or even a good tennis game.

"Sex has nothing to do with commitment," he said. "It's not possible to promise to have sex with another person for the rest of your life. It is very hard to will to have it, or at least to enjoy it."

He said society was placing too great a burden on sex, using it as the glue to hold a marriage together, when in his view it may cause most marital failures.

Ashbury said he defends neither love nor marriage nor monogamy, but "commitment" and an intimacy that takes time to develop and implies that each partner will be available to each other in the future.

Spectacular Leaps at Dawn By Hang-Gliding Enthusiasts

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, CALIF. (NYT) — Dawn in Yosemite Valley. Sunlight spills into the misty chasm like the tall ribbons of waterfalls that plunge over the rim of rock ledges. The dark granite faces of El Capitan and Half-Dome brighten to a smooth metallic finish.

Then, high above the valley floor, the first triangular shape appears against the sky. It slices sunward from Glacier Point, turns at mid-valley, and makes a long silent slide toward a receding shadow cast by a canyon wall 3,000 feet high.

Quickly, another delta-shaped follows the first, like a mate to an early-morning bird of prey, then another and another.

Hang-gliding has come to Yosemite.

Over the past year, hang-gliding enthusiasts have been making spectacular leaps at dawn from the summit of Glacier Point, spiraling though the Sierra air to land on a soft green meadow outside Yosemite Village, a verticale drop of 3,200 feet on flights that may last up to 20 minutes.

The Yosemite flight is becoming the ultimate experience in the expanding enthusiasm for hang-gliding, a California phenomenon that in recent months has been spreading its wings across the U.S. and Canada.

The activity has the sanction of Yosemite Park officials, and is regulated by a park ranger.

However, Yosemite is the only national park where hang-gliding activity is tolerated. For some time now, in the hang-glider's search for taller launching pads and grander panoramas to embrace his earthward flights, the sport has been carried to the mountains from the Pacific coastal dunes where it has flourished for the past three years.

The department of the interior has issued a memorandum that hang-gliding is not a proper function of the national parks, but no regulation has yet officially banned the risky sport, providing the Yosemite administrators with an opportunity to observe the safety record of a limited, supervised program.

"I think hang-gliding is a marvelous sport that can be done on private land or in the national forests," said Nathanial Reed, assistant Secretary of the Interior for Wildlife and National Parks. "I don't believe that it is the kind of thing that the national parks were created for."

He said that regulations banning the activity in all national parks were now being drawn.

Last year, 32 hang-glider fliers — they call themselves "pilots" — were killed in accidents, with most of the deaths occurring in California, a figure that is about equal to the natinal total of deaths resulting from sky-diving.

An estimated 25,000 Americans have now participated in hang-gliding activities of one form or another, mostly short flights over sloping hillsides that somewhat limit the physical danger.

When the program began there last year, the pilots simply leaped from the edge of a sheer wall into space like Icarus, knifing their overhead sail into the void in a plummeting dive that placed great stress on the man and his machine — a harness attachment fitted beneath a delta-shaped canopy framed by Tubular aircraft aluminum, all of which weighs about 35 pounds.

All flights take place between 6:30 and 8:30 a.m. before the park officially opens for the day, a strategy designed to discourage spectators from dangerously mobbing the launch site.

Test Developed to Aid Cystic Fibrosis Victims

MONTREAL (CP) — Cystic fibrosis-related deaths could be greatly reduced if hospitals would adopt a mass screening procedure for all newborn babies, an American and a West German doctor say.

Dr. Harry Shwachman, professor of pediatrics at Children's Hospital Medical Centre in Boston, and Dr. Ulrich Stephen, head physician at University Children's Clinic in Erlangen, West Germany, said early diagnosis using a simple test developed in Germany could double the average life span of cystic fibrosis victims.

At present, most victims die before reaching age 15.

The two doctors are in Montreal as part of a promotional tour to urge adoption of the test here. It costs about 20 cents a baby, and is used for mass screenings in Alberta, British Columbia and Manitoba.

Dr. Schwachman says the cystic fibrosis clinic at his Boston hospital has about 800 patients and "90 of them are over the age of 25," a fact he attributes to early testing of high risk babies.

Cystic fibrosis is an inherited disease that affects the pancreas, the respiratory system and the sweat glands.

No cure is known, but the health of victims can be improved and their lives extended through the use of antibiotics.

Studies show about one baby in every 1,200 to 2,000 will have cystic fibrosis.

Sonar Hunts Laker

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich. (UPI) — A joint U.S.-Canadian search team, using an experimental sonar unit, has launched a renewed search for the sunken ore freighter Edmund Fitzgerald.

The team headed by Dr. Lloyd Bresleau of the Coast Guard Research Centre in Groton, Conn., left the U.S. Coast Guard station here late Friday to search in an area one mile beyond the Canadian side of the international boundary in Lake Superior.

The crew of a U.S. navy anti-submarine aricraft Friday reported locating the vessel in 350-foot deep water about two miles from where it was last seen.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Restrictions fall away. You can be more independent in thought, action. Follow through on questions, answers. Insist on being heard and seen. Cycle is high and circumstances favor your efforts. Gemini, Virgo persons could figure prominently.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Highlight areas containing doubts, seclusion, confinement. You will get moral backing from one you respect, love. You get what you want — be sure your actual needs also are filled. You might be visiting a hospital, club, institute. Outcome is favorable. Honor coould be received as result.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emphasis on friends, desires, fulfillment of wishes, possible enactment of fantasies. Social event proves constructive. You also receive spiritual insights. Be receptive. Enjoy accolade. Dispel false modesty.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You might find yourself conferring with "very important person." Key is to perceive opportunity, potential, to show that you are not afraid of responsibility. Capricorn, Cancer could be involved. Room may be prepared for you at more elevated position.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Long-range planning is on agenda. You are clearly — key is to believe in yourself. You gain added recognition. More persons become aware of your views, achievements. Aries, Libra could be in picture.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Flexibility is required. Make room for views of partner, mate. Emphasis remains on legalities, cooperative efforts. Strive for creativity, independence. Dynamic associate can show the way.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Popularity is tested. Key is to make intelligent concessions. Cycle is such that this should be a period of preparation as contrasted to direct action. Legal matters command attention. Be aware of commitments — and costs. Aquarian is in picture.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): There is choice— where employment, special tasks are concerned. You have greater freedom in areas generally restricted. Make the most of chance to expand horizons. Gemini, Virgo and Sagittarius figure prominently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Favorable Moon aspect coincides now with special relationship, creative changes and a renewed feeling of vitality. Member of opposite sex figures prominently. Quick decisions are featured. Pace quickens and aura of excitement lends spice to your life.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Obtain hint from Scorpio message. What appears unreasonable delay or obstacle — is temporary and eventually works in your favor. Gemini, Virgo persons play roles. Accent on home, business, conclusion of deal transaction.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Family affairs are featured. Quick trips, calls, messages command attention. Taurus, Libra could be in picture. Ideas concerning home comfort, beauty surge to forefront. Relative wants to discuss money.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Spotlight on what you own, what is collected, discarded. Evaluate needs. See as is; not through distorted prism. You learn how to streamline procedures and profit as result. Virgo and another Piscean could be featured.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are intense, introspective, creative, much aware of loneliness. April was very significant — March and December could be your outstanding months in 1976 Pisces, Virgo persons play important roles in your life. You've been restricted, blocked — but that's ending and happiness is about to descend on you!

Astrological Forecast for Monday, Nov. 17

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You gain access to information which promotes caution where investments are concerned. Take time to be sure — hold off on speculative schemes. One who is misinformed would like to see you in that same state. Don't be goaded into premature action.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You do have faults, but you also know what is right and now you strive to correct past mistakes. Cycle is high and you're going to feel better, do better and arrive at equitable arrangement with older family member.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You're called upon to prove points, to verify experience — and to deal with Cancer, Capricorn types. Accent on bringing hidden elements into open. What was a "dull pace and place" may be electrical with sudden excitement.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are able to complete "delicate" assignment. Those who speak up may expect something in return. Know it and do something about it. There are no free rides. Realize this — be grown up about it and you'll benefit. Someone is trying to tell you something!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You're challenged. But you're "up to it." Air of excitement prevails. You could be in midst of controversy — but you enjoy it. Another Leo — and an Aquarian — figure prominently. An "opponent" does you a favor.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Trust intuition. Teach and learn. Discuss problems with family member. Consolidate. Check food supply. Prepare for future — budget probable needs. Accent on last-minute message which affects travel, written material, communications, study program.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Diversify. Expand horizons, base of operations. Plug money loopholes. You're spending more than is required. You're getting less and not enjoying what you obtain. Now, pull strings taut. Response will be favorable. Gemini, Sagittarius, figure prominently.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You learn who has been placing roadblocks in plans. You also know what to do. Courage is tested. Can you face confrontation? No one promised you a bed of roses. You're capable of accommodating situation that is temporarily difficult. Know it and don't sell yourself short.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stress ability to analyze, to perceive, to draw conclusions based on facts that escape others. Gemini is involved — another Sagittarian could also be in picture. A relative, trying to keep a secret, is clumsy about it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You learn about costs, what mate or partner can afford, how far you can go, who is backing you and who would like to see you fall on your face. A situation, at home base, commands attention. Money is involved.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Slow down — refuse to be rushed, pushed, forced, cajoled. Play waiting game. Legal and other aspects are going the "wrong way." However, you win by waiting, analyzing, gathering information. Pisces, Virgo play key roles.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Showdown could occur with some who take you for granted. Includes relatives. You win. But leave others a face-saving device. Means get points across in meaningful manner, but don't "rub it in." Older indivdual should not be robbed — or deprived — of dignity.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are an organizer, somewhat of a promoter. You are dynamic, forceful, vital, virile in sense that you give your all, no halfway measures. You've had an exciting year, filled with changes, creative contacts. December will be one of your most important months of the year. Capricorn, Cancer persons play important roles in your life.

Workmen's clothes fashionable

By STAN DELAPLONE

NICE, France — This is the fashionable coast of southern France. Where millionaire Greeks keep a yacht in the harbor. And tanned French starlets parade in bikinis that would make a parson leave the pulpit.

Found a room in the Hotel Paradise. Right above Louis Vuitton — the luggage man who's so in style he won't take credit cards. Across the street is Yves St. Laurent. A high style equestrian house. Fancy linen shop.

A busy street with a park and gushing fountain at the end. At a cost per day — ready? — only $12.

The workmen's clothes of France are the hottest thing in fashions. American models stop men raking leaves, hauling bricks, laying pipe, and try to buy the work clothes off their backs. (Hard to buy singly. Usually sold in bulk).

On the way down from the Maritime Alps I spotted a workman crunching down a gravel road. You could sell him on sight in any fine boutique. The great handmade broom-rake would go for $20 in a decorator shop.

They all look like they came out of the same cookie cutter: Brow nfaces. Moustaches like the statues of French soldiers you see in every town square: "Mort pour la Patrie — 1914-1918." And the names carved below in stone.

This man was settling by the roadside for lunch. Pulled out a bottle of wine the size of a small fire plug. Tore off a chunk of French bread. Sliced some salami and cut a piece out of a wheel of Brie.

Telegram from Danish tourist office: "Your kalte bord dinner at the Copenhagen railway station (best in town) cost about $7.50. Dinners at small restaurants should be about $6. Fancier restaurants, $12. Smorrebrod — open face sandwiches — $1 to $1.50."

Your drink in Copenhagen gives off an occasional little sigh. Dane told me, "The ice comes from Greenland glaciers. The sigh comes from air bubbles trapped in ice thousands of years ago."

Must be the purest air in the world today. (But maybe he was putting me on.)

□

Plan on $20 tips added to every $100 you spend. On the Continent, $15 service for every $100 goes on your bill automatically. Then you leave a little loose change on the plate. The chambermaid doesn't think her 15 per cent shows what you really are — The Last of the Big Time Spenders. And there's the hotel porter and the doorman and the railroad porter and taxis. That eats up the $5 cushion. Welcome stranger!

Since this will be our first trip to Europe — we are in our sixties — how should we carry travel cheques and valuables? Where do you hide them in hotels?"

I've never had anything stolen from me so I'm careless. I carry travel cheques in my pocket or in my suitcase. If you'd feel better, the management will put them in a safe for you.

Carry your passport if you're going to cash them. They want it for identification.

Worst place for hotel thievery is New York city. Second is Nairobi. Safest place, Ireland where many hotels don't even have room keys. "You don't want a room key, sir," said the Irish maid. "If you lost it now in the street, you wouldn't be getting in again, would you?"

The bill fold that carries passport, travel cheques, money and air tickets must be the best thing for pickpockets since the Artful Dodger. A quick pick and you've got EVERYTHING the man has.

Staple the travel cheque stubs together. In room robbing, the latest thing is "leafing." The burglar pries open the brads on your travel checks and takes out a few at random. Chances are you'll never notice they're gone.

Canadian tourists increase

The number of Canadian tourists visiting South Africa reached new record highs for the months of June and July this year and brought the seven-month total also to a new high.

Hans Blokker, manager of the South African Tourist Corporation office in Canada, reports Canadian tourists totalled 452 in June, the best June on record and a rise of 25 per cent over June of last year. Similarly, July was the best July on record this year, with Canadian visitors up 28 per cent to 745. The seven-month total rose 29 per cent — from 4,305 to a new record for the period of 5,546.

The seven-month total was 15½ per cent above the comparable period for 1973, the record year to date for Canadians visiting South Africa.

They pray for king

WATERFORD, Ireland — The Rosary is recited every day for the soul of King Henry VIII in a 400-year-old charitable institution in this southeastern Irish city. This was disclosed at the opening of a home for the aged in Waterford recently.

The home has opened a new chapter in the history of the Holy Ghost Hospital, one of Ireland's oldest charities, which was founded by a Royal Charter of King Henry VIII in 1545. Under the terms of the charter, King Henry is still prayed for every day at eveging prayers by the beneficiaries of the charity.

Jousting

Knights in shining armour, jousting displays and sword fighting are among the medieval attractions for Canadian visitors visiting Gwrych Castle, Abergele, between the North Wales resorts of Colwyn Bay and Rhyl.

Other less bloodthirsty highlights include children's pony rides, a magic dragon railway and musical afternoons.

Another attraction is a special banquet held weekly at a charge of $11 per head.

"If this is what you get on a trip to Britain you're doing better than I am—and I live there!"

Lucky you. British Airways offers some fabulous "package" holidays to London and Europe.
Take our 22/45 day off-season return fare for example.
It costs just $429 from Vancouver to London.
And a really nice London hotel won't break your budget either.
How does $12 a night sound?
Ask about British Airways' wide selection of Enterprise Charter Holidays to the Mediterranean area.
Do you know that for a price starting from about $230 you can spend a week in the sun.
And that's with return airfare from London, hotel and most meals included.
Or there's the famous British Airways one-week London Mini Show Tour. It's not just theatre tickets and a hotel, you know. All sorts of exciting extras are included as well.
And it can cost you as little as $83 on top of your airfare to London.
Just have a look at the brochure.
See your British Airways travel agent for all the facts and figures. And say that Roz told you about it.

P.S. For full details about terms and conditions of booking, ask your travel agent for the London Show Tours brochure. And a couple of points about airfares in general: fares quoted are for departure in November through March and are subject to change.
It costs $15 extra each way to travel at weekends.

We'll take good care of you.
To Britain. Europe. The World.

Wildlife photography tips for tourist

JOHANNESBURG — Strange as it may seem, many visitors to South Africa actually forget to bring their cameras with them although the big thrill for the average tourist is seeing the wildlife in the country's parks and game reserves.

Of those who do bring a camera, a surprisingly large number have little or no idea on how to operate one properly, and thereby miss even relatively simple shots.

Photographically, South Africa is a fascinating country, rich in intriguing contrasts. One day it may be a hungry lioness crouching low with eyes riveted on an approaching antelope, the next day a secretary bird attacking a snake with beak and talons, at another time fields of wild flowers stretching clear to the horizon.

Kruger National Park, with an area equal to that of Lake Ontario, contains more species of wildlife than any other park in the world. You won't encounter the seemingly never-ending migrating herds of a particular animal there, but if you are patient and pick the right time of year, you'll see more different kinds of animals and birds in this park than is possible anywhere else.

With such fascinating photographic subjects, it makes sense to come prepared to capture at least some of them on film — that is, if you like to take pictures.

Although a fair share of animal pictures can be taken with a relatively inexpensive camera, the best solution for the more serious tourist-photographer is to come equipped with two identical single lens reflex cameras, one with a 135mm lens attached to it and the other with a 300mm lens. A normal or wide angle lens is also advisable for other kinds of pictures, but for wildlife the 135 and 300mm lenses make an excellent combination. The first permits enough depth of field to include detail like bush, trees, rocks and grass, and with the 300mm lens you can capture the more elusive animals which frequently permit you no more than a second or so before they dart off into the bush.

Paul Sherfield of Bulawayo, Rhodesia, an expert on African wildlife photography, claims that 50 per cent of the success in such photography depends on finding the subject within camera range and the other 50 per cent in being quick on the mark. This assumes of course, that the photographer is thoroughly familiar with his equipment.

Emotion is another hazard. Try not to let emotion get the upper hand, says Sherffeld. Many a picture is spoiled by camera shake, a risk that can be reduced appreciably by using fast film and shutter speeds.

Here are some other points for the visitor to remember:

- The best time for photographs in South African game parks is early morning or late afternoon when most animals are on the move. During the hotter part of the day they seek the shadows and cannot easily be photographed.
- Take all shots from your car or bus, except for certain spots along rivers where visitors may leave their vehicles to photograph hippos or crocodiles.
- For color, don't use a film with a speed of less than 64 ASA (19 DIN). This will enable you to operate the camera at fairly high shutter speeds. For black and white film, a speed of 125 ASA is considered ideal under normal conditions.

Generally speaking, tourists to most South African game parks can expect to see and photograph lion, elephant, giraffe, hippo, crocodile, baboons and monkeys, zebra, wildebeest, buffalo and antelope.

Leopard, cheetah hyena and wild dogs are more timid, but many tourists have captured exciting shots of these animals as well.

Queen's gallery open

The Queen's gallery in Buckingham Palace is open to the public Tuesday through Saturday from 11 to 5 p.m. and on Sundays from 2-5 p.m. The Gallery is part of the private chapel at the palace and was constructed in 1962 on the site of a John Nash conservatory, built about 1831.

Nowadays it is used to allow the public to see part of the immense personal art collection of the Crown, and until the end of September features an exhibition of art objects acquired under George III.

A door-lock made especially for George III (1738-1820) was so designed that if anyone tampered with it, bells would ring and the intruder would be shot with 2 pistols hidden inside the mechanism. It was King George who bought Buckingham Palace — then called Buckingham House — from Sir Charles Sheffield in 1762, transformed it and filled it with paintings, furniture, clocks, procelain and other works of art.

The new exhibition features a selection of Canaletto paintings and drawings, as well as works by Gainsborough, Lawrence, Poussin, Bernini, Castiglione and others. The exhibition has one four-sided astronomical clock dated 1768 with faces showing the time at various longitudes, the tides, phases of the moon, the position of the stars and motions of the planets as well as a 24-hour dial. Also featured are fine pieces of furniture, English silver, Chelsea and Wedgwood porcelain, gems, books and musical manuscripts. Entrance charge: adults 50c; children 25c.

South Seas islands still have simplicity, beauty

By JERRY HULSE

The 20th century is reaching out to the South Pacific on the wings of a jet.

Farewell, Bloody Mary. Will the loveliest of all islands — Bora Bora — remain secure?

New hotels have risen on once deserted beaches. Avis and Hertz are doing a lively business. Tour buses backfire along country roads.

Still, some things remain as always. Who can change a sunset? Or turn the tide that pounds against some distant reef?

I recall American Samoa soon after the first jet arrived. No one made much fuss. We stayed at Mary Pritchard's ramshackle Rainmaker Inn. It had 15 rooms and exuded its own brand of tropical charm.

The rainmaker opened during an era that filled the minds of men with peaceful dreams of this South Seas outpost and their hearts with the melancholy memory of Somerset Maugham's sweet bad girl, Sadie Thompson.

It seemed to me that Samoa was as unspoiled as it was possible for a place to be that had taken on good plumbing and dry martinis.

How long can the scene survive? With haunting sadness, I suspect that it must all change one day. But presently Samoa, as well as dozens of other islands in the South Seas, remains a retreat for those of us who have grown weary of our own polluted brand of civilization.

You go to Samoa for its simplicity and beauty, not for the Waikiki style of high-rise vacationing.

But I was talking about the old Rainmaker Inn: On my first visit to Samoa the Rainmaker still offered shelter to visitors. It was a wonderful old clapboard place with a tin roof and floors that creaked. Yes, and the bedsprings were noisy, too. they could keep you awake at night.

Whenever guest rooms were full, makeshift accommodations were created with the installation of portable dressing screens.

Suddenly a hallway became a bedroom. It was as simple as that. No one complained.

This was the charm of the Rainmaker. You never knew what to expect.

Down in town at Pritchard's general store, Dior perfumes were stacked alongside Granny Goose potato chips. And nearby, bless her memory, was Sadie Thompson's old place.

Beer was two bits a glass.

It was pleassnt, nourishing the spirit's simple wants in these surroundings. But one day I decided to take my leave of American Samoa. I wanted to see Western Samoa, which is another place altogether and another story.

At the foot of Mt. Fao I came across a seaside village where children sing noisily and the pigs run free.

In Apia, which is the main settlement down along the coast, visitors still check in at Aggie Grey's. Some claim Aggie is the real Bloody Mary of James Michener's pen, but she stubbornly denies this.

Still, she tells marvelous stories. While watching me for beers she told haunting tales of the South Pacific, among them one about how she came to build her hotel.

It was during the Second World War, she said, and she saw our Seabees sleeping in the rain. This certainly wouldn't do, she decided.

So she created the hotel.

Earlier the island had drawn Robert Louis Stevenson to his final resting place. He lived in Western Samoa and he died there. After this the tourists came and so now business is good at Aggie Grey's.

Bloody Mary? Who knows?

After this I got aboard a vintage DC-3 and then flew on to Tonga. It is doubtful that Polynesian airlines still flies such old planes as the DC-3. It's a jet world now. But it was fun then, rattling along at about 150 m.p.h. in this old prop job.

The stewardess was a Polynesian dream who floated up and down the aisle in a low slung pareau, passing out rum drinks and chunks of papaya and pinapple.

Later on we flew over the smoldering island of Tafua, which is where Capt. Bligh sought refuge after the storied mutiny. The volcano hissed at us as we made our pass and behind us the smoke rose like cumulus clouds.

Our landing at Tonga was an adventure in itself. Indeed, it was nothing less than spectacular, considering the field was a simple grass runway that had been shaved from a coconut grove. (Now I understand they've built a modern airport at Tonga which seems a pity; the old one seemed so proper in such a remote setting.)

Jakarta Troops Enter Timor

HONG KONG (WP) — Regular units of the Indonesian Army crossed into Portuguese Timor four weeks ago and have been responsible for virtually all of the fighting presented to the world as a "counter-attack" by Timorese freedom fighters, according to sources in the Indonesian capital.

The sudden military success of the troops of the UDT (Timor Democratic Union) and Apodeti (the original pro-Indonesian party) has already led to widespread suspicion of Indonesian involvement. The UDT and Apodeti men were expelled from Portuguese Timor by the forces of the left-wing Fretilin Independence party after the brief civil war that followed the collapse of Portuguese authority in the colony. They (the other half of the island of Timor) are in total disarray.

They were few in number, untrained and armed at that stage with a pathetic variety of weapons which included bows and arrows and air guns. Their "transformation" into units capable of successful assaults on defended towns was indeed an amazing phenomenon. Common sense suggested there must be Indonesian intervention, but the degree of it was unclear.

According to Jakarta sources, the main fighting has been done by Indonesian regulars. About a brigade has been committed in all, but, in order to maintain the fiction of guerrilla war, a "ceiling" on the number of troops used in any one attack has been set at two companies (about 200 men).

The companies probably faced larger numbers of Fretilin defenders in the towns they have attacked so far.

But they are fully trained soldiers, while Fretilin has only a sprinkling of men with real army experience. And they have had the benefit of fire support from Indonesian field guns and mortars, as well as reconassance by helicopters. In addition, the Indonesians are led by eager young officers, anxious to distinguish themselves in what is likely to be Indonesia's last, albeit covert, de-colonization war.

★ ★ ★

The troops committed are part of the large force Indonesia has gathered on its side of the border. These are thought to total a division, including special forces, known by the acronym Kopasada Paratroopers, and ordinary infantry.

There is also a large force of marines on a small island just off Timor.

Some of these marine units were taken by landing craft about two weeks ago and put ashore near Bacau, a town west of Dili, the capital of Portuguese Timor.

Close by is the colony's only international airport. (Dili itself has only a small air strip for light planes). The Marines have establisshed a zone of control in this area, which has been reported in the Indonesian press as an upsurge of guerrilla activity by the ubiquitous UDT and Apodeti forces.

★ ★ ★

These latter forces do exist, but they have done their fighting on the southern, and unimportant, part of the front, away from the area of the main thrust. Smaller units have accompanied regular forces in the big attacks and occupied the towns afterward.

The original plan of campaign, the sources believe, was to drive on for Dili, hoping to take the capital by the beginning of this month.

But this idea was abandoned, partly because the early onset of the rainy season made the roads difficult, and also because of the agreement reached a week ago between Portugal and Indonesia on the future of the territory.

This calls for a conference between Portugal and the three parties.

It amounts to a plan for handing over the territory to the Indonesians in a respectable way, since a defeated Fretilin would be helpless to prevent an eventual decision by the other two parties to join Indonesia.

Smoke break, and time to pan the tailings for some of the Klondike gold missed by the miners.

Yukon History, and Sweat

By LYNNA MUSTARD

DAWSON CITY — The land of the Klondike gold fields in the Yukon is still yielding treasure to those who have the desire to earn it. With their future development of the gold fields and Dawson City in mind, Parks Canada employed a crew to spend long hours in a blistering sun, working the land of Hunker Creek. Yet it wasn't the gold they wanted. The treasure Parks Canada sought was one massive old water pump that belonged to the King of the Klondike, Big Alex McDonald.

Bit Alex struck it rich in the Gold Rush of 1898 when he acquired half of Claim Number Thirty on Eldorado Creek for a sack of flour and a side of bacon. Not one to work the land himself, McDonald let it out on a lay to two men. His percentage as owner was half of whatever the men won from the ground, and the pay-streak on "Thirty" was very rich and wide. With his gold, McDonald immediately bought more claims and prospered. He then went on to invest his growing fortune in more property, and in any other business venture he thought might turn him a profit.

The water pump on Hunker was an expensive and unsuccessful venture and one of the many reasons that McDonald — said to be worth about seven million at one time — died penniless on Slough Creek, just 15 years after the Gold Rush.

Big Alex had the Riedler Pumping Engine built for him by the Alice Chalmers Company of Chicago in 1903. According to Mr. John Gould, Interpretive Officer, Parks Canada, McDonald had it brought into the Klondike by sternwheeler, and then moved to Hunker by horse and wagon. Hunker Creek is about ten miles from Dawson City.

Once the pump was placed and primed, McDonald pumped the water of the creek up into the surrounding hills and sold the water to miners working their claims. But the miners could not afford the water McDonald pumped to them at the rate of 1500 gallons per minute. The rich lodes had run out before 1903 and the miners were working a much lower grade gold. And according to the Geological Survey of Canada, Yukon Territory, 1898 to 1933, miners were paying seven to eight dollars an hour for water being pumped up to them at the rate of 1100 gallons per minute.

Another reason why the entire venture was impractical was that the fire box in McDonald's pump was designed to burn anthracite, not wood. Very little (if any) anthracite was available to Big Alex, so he burned low-grade coal and wood in the boilers. He was paying $4.00 a cord for wood and burning four cords at once without getting the heat level needed to run the boilers efficiently. As a result, the pump was only in use for about two years before it was abandoned on the edge of Hunker Creek.

There it remained, from 1905 to 1975, unused and rusting and gradually buried by earth, bushes and tailing piles from mining operations. In 1971, mining partners Mike Stutter and Benny Warmsby acquired the pump when they purchased the land for mining purposes. When they began to mine their claim in 1973, they gave the pump to Parks Canada.

However, Parks Canada did not remove its new acquisition from Hunker Creek immediately. The reason for this, stated Bruce Harvey, area superintendent for Parks Canada, is that the pump's significance as relative to mining in the area was then undetermined. Also, there was the question of the dollars and cents and manpower involved in moving the pump when it was not at the time considered a priority.

Early in 1975, Parks Canada acquired the Bear Creek mining complex near Dawson, with the intention of making it an interpretive centre displaying the minning methods used in the surrounding gold fields. With this development, the water pump from the turn-of-the-century gained importance. When Stutter informed Parks Canada in early July of this year that the pump was in danger of being completely covered by the tailing piles from their claim up the hill, approval was obtained from Parks Canada Prairie Regional Office in Winnipeg to rescue the old pump and move it to Bear Creek.

Warmsby and Stutter cooperated in protecting the pump from the tailing piles of their mining operation. Stutter stated that in the first week of July, his crew averaged more than three hours a day in moving the tailings away from the pump. The partners also put their cat at the disposal of Parks Canada — for the regular hourly fee — so the Parks Canada crew could continue shifting the tailings.

A five person crew (four men and one woman) began the excavation of the pump on July 7th. With the temperature soaring up around 36 degree C., the crew shovelled and sluiced away the six to eight feet of rocks, gravel and earth covering the pump and its two huge boilers. Whenever possible, the crew employed the high-powered efficiency of a cat and a back hoe to move th mounds of earth from beside the pump.

Otherwise, the hard-working crew used two water hoses, two inches in diameter, and a fire hose that propels water at 100 lbs. pressure to sluice away the earth. Water ran everywhere on the site and stood four feet deep at the back. A near-by spring sent tiny rivuletts underground to seep throughout the site.

Along with their thermoses, the crew brought their gold pans to work. After all, they were working in the midst of the Kondike gold fields. They panned for gold during coffee breaks and quite often were rewarded with a few flakes of colour.

As the excavation proceeded into the second week of July, the size of the emerging pump and accompanying boilers began to lend it added importance. The flywheel of the pump is ten feet in diameter. A rough measurement taken from the top of the pressure tanks down into the excavation site put the height of the pumping engine at 13 feet. The two boilers are 18 feet in length and 12 feet in height. Discovery of the pump's size increased the difficulty involved in moving it to Bear Creak. Superintendent Frank McGill of Dawson contacted Ottawa for assistance and they sent out marine engineer Alex Barbour to supervise the move.

Barbour had been to both Dawson and Whitehorse before in advisory and supervisory capacities for Parks Canada operations. He arrived on a Friday afternoon and quickly set to work, as the threat of burial by tailing piles still hung over the old pump. Stutter and Warmsby could not work around the site much longer. With a calculating eye, Barbour decided how to remove the pump from the site and in a rich Scottish accent began directing the operation.

Barbour consulted with Harry Campbell of the Klondike Transport Company and with John Gould to determine what men and equipment were available for the job. Once Barbour had the pump dismantled and out of its old site, it was Mr. Campbell's responsibility to move the pump and boilers to Bear Creek. The equipment they decided to use was two 977 Caterpillars, three dump trucks, two flat-bed trucks and two front-end loaders. No mention was made of horse and wagon.

Another must for the job was penetrating oil — to release the stiff and rusted bolts — so Barbour immediately purchased all the oil available in Dawson . . . three cans. (Milk, beer and penetrating oil were only three of the many items that were in short supply in Dawson this summer. Shortages are caused by strikes on the Outside, roads washouts and the usual problems involved in transporting goods great distances.)

Barbour's plan was to dismantle the pump into pieces the Cats could handle, lift the pieces out and temporarily set them aside until the entire pump was out. The boilers would then be rolled out of their beds and the whole works moved to Bear Creek. He had already determined what pieces on the pump could be sacrificed and what had to be saved. For example, the nuts and bolts could go but things like the castings were saved because they were all of original material, not easily replaced.

Cutting torches were used on the bolts that hadn't released with the penetrating oil and the cast iron pump was eventually divided into eight major pieces. Each piece, on the average, weighed seven tons.

A few loads of tailing piles were dumped beside the pump to give the equipment and good footing to lift out the heavy pieces. The first piece to be hauled off the pump's cement pad was the condensor, suction pipe and filter tank. Chains were wrapped around it and hooked to the loaders on the big Cats. Together they slowly lifted it out and swung it aside. In this manner they carefully moved all eight pieces, with minimal damage to the old pump.

By Sunday afternoon, just two days after they began the major part of the move, the pump was dismantled and sitting in a clearing near Hunker Road, ready for the move to Bear Creek. All that now remained at the original site were the two seven and a half ton boilers.

Under Barbour's direction, the back hoe dug a trench all around the boilers to drain the site and expose the boiler walls. Because the manhole cover had been removed when the boiler was last used, the front boiler was full of sand. This sand had to be sluiced out of all the 58 fire tubes in the boiler.

Once the sand was sluiced out, some fill was dumped into the site to give the cats good footing near the boilers. The brick wall on the side of the front boiler was carefully taken apart and all the bricks were saved. The plan for the boilers was to simply roll them out of their bed. In preparation, the boiler tie rods were cut and the far boiler was supported by two timbers butted up against one of the cats. This was to prevent the far boiler from rolling backwards into the trench when the front boiler was rolled away.

Two eight by eight timbers were driven under the front boiler and chains are shackled to the back boiler feet and hooked on the loader of one of the cats. The cat strained against the chains and — according to plan — the front boiler rolled from its bed. The second one followed shortly after and the boilers were loaded directly onto a flat-bed truck and transported to Bear Creek. Harry Campbell and his crew loaded the dismantled pump on the flat-bed trucks and it soon followed the boilers to the future interpretation centre.

Big Alex McDonald's old water pump is no longer impressive . . . lying in its disjointed state in the long grass and fireweed. But in the future, when the peaceful spot is transformed into an active centre representing the mining methods of the Klondike gold fields, the huge pump will be only one of the elements with an interesting history behind it.

Lyle-Young

Pastor Harvey Baker officiated at a double-ring ceremony in the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints on September 27, 1975, at 7 p.m. when Andrea Linda, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Young of the Malahat Tent and Trailer Park, exchanged wedding vows with Danny Wayne, son of Mr and Mrs. Ernest Lyle. Mrs. Baker was the organist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an elegant wedding gown of silk organza over taffeta. The fitted bodice, with a high neckline, was lavishly adorned with Alecon lace, as were the Bishop sleeves. Satin ribbon encircled the empire waist. A deep flounce bordered with matching lace enhanced the A-line skirt and full train sweeping back from the waist. A chapel veil of silk illusion misted from a high headpiece of lace embroidered with pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses and white carnations. The bride was attended by her sister, Marianne, as Maid of Honour; and by her other sister Cherie, and her cousin, Trisha, as bridesmaids. The groom's niece, Lareen, was the flowergirl. The best man was the groom's oldest brother, Ernie; and the ushers were his brothers, Rodney and Barry.

The reception was held at the Westwind Motor Inn. Toast to the bride was given by her grandfather, Mr. Ernest Sawyer. The young couple are now residing at 206-991 Cloverdale Ave., Victoria. (Insured.)

OVER 200' OF RUGGED COASTLINE
When I first viewed this property, I was overcome with awe and exhilaration. Situated at the waters edge is a very carefully planned open post and beam 2 bedrm home (the owners built it as their retirement home) of about 1800 sq. ft. The all cedar exterior harmonizes perfectly with its rustic 5 acres. Two separate lots combined. Though mostly treed, the vendors have flowers and shrubs, all in the right places, large fenced veg. garden and greenhouse too. No corners were cut when building it (much of the lumber is from their own homesite). House features hot water heat, all thermoglass, ultra modern kitchen with plenty of room, 2½ full baths. Convenient laundry and wash-up room. An absolutely unbelievable central floor to ceiling fireplace, with see-through firebox. Lots of windows and a stimulating seaview from every room in the house, a ways out and irreplaceable at $120,000. Exclusive with

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.
Don't allow the reader to speculate.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford bring the desired results do so you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call:

GARDENING

. . . Don't Curse Those Nice November Rains

In stores, offices, homes and on the street, the main topic of conversation during the first part of November was rain, which was considered by most local residents as being abnormal.

Each news report of a 24-hour rainfall record being broken for a given date increased the belief that something phenomenal was happening, but most of these reports were for areas outside Victoria, and some occurred on days when we enjoyed broken cloud and sunny intervals.

Our local record for a given date was broken on Nov. 6. On that date the Tillicum recording station measured 31 millimetres which was not much over the 27 mm on Nov. 11 last year.

The total rainfall for the first 8 days of November was 80 mm compared with 71 mm in 6 days last year, which indictates a comparable rainfall but for a shorter period, and reminds us that memory is a fickle thing.

Adjectives such as awful, terrible, miserable, messy, horrible and hateful, were heard everywhere, but not once did I hear a good word said about the rain. Nor did I hear any gardeners say their knowledge had been increased through observations made during the period.

The normal November rainfall is a boon to the home gardener. It gives first hand information on the amount of residual moisture in the soil, on natural drainage conditions and warns of areas our plants are not likely to tolerate. A little observation when the fall rains start can save the gardener many problems.

The first three days of rain disappeared into the soil without leaving the tiniest puddles. This indicated how dry our soils had become over summer despite frequent watering. Planting holes prepared during the break that followed showed bone dry soil below the eight inch level.

Observant gardeners, noting the dryness of open areas, immediately checked the sheltered spots along foundations under overhanging eaves, and on the north side of fences and buildings. Many of us discovered we had put the garden hose away too soon.

Gardeners requesting information on the placement of new acquisitions had no idea whether their soils were wet or dry, saying it was impossible to go out in the prevailing weather to see what the soil was like.

Some seemed quite indignant when told the plant in question needed a well drained position, and the ideal time to find such a location was during a heavy downpour.

As the 50 mm mark was reached this month, it was easy to see where water was collecting on the surface and to push a stick into the soggy soil as a reminder. After the first rains ceased, a check once or twice a day gave a very good idea of the speed with which the collected water drained away.

Every home gardener with fall planting still to be done had better answers to his questions right in his own garden than could be expected from someone unfamiliar with the property.

Where holes had been dug for shrubs and trees as recommended in this column at the end of September, an excellent opportunity was afforded to discover whether the choice of location was likely to be satisfactory.

The gardener could see whether any appreciable amount of rain water collected in the holes, and how long it remained, then, decide whether the plant roots that were to go into the holes were likely to tolerate the conditions.

With the subsoil broken up and held open with rough, partially decomposed compost, it was easy to determine if the amount of drainage would be satisfactory. If so, the plants could go in right away; if not, conditions could be improved before planting was attempted.

Oldtimers, as we call them, who have gardened in a given area for several decades, can hazard a reasonable guess as to the cause of problems likely to be encountered. But at the best they can only make suggestions when the garden concerned is unknown.

The gardener living on the property has all the answers, as well as the opportunity to find those answers. The real causes are right there waiting to be observed.

Gardening entails more than pottering around in fair weather. It entails a tour of the garden every day of the year, in rain, gales, snow and balmy summer sunshine, to observe how the plants are enduring prevailing conditions.

Home gardeners seem especially allergic to rain. Some go as far as telling me they will be pleased when the rain starts and they can pack up gardening. It is among this group we find those constantly beset by problems, probably because they never have intimate contact with their plants once the heydays of fall have passed.

I consider be fortunate that I volunteered to take weather observations twice a day, a job that has to be done on time regardless of conditions.

On these trips across the garden to the weather screen I have the opportunity to mentally record how the plants are faring, soil conditions, need for shelter or additional drainage.

The daily check allows prompt action to be taken to prevent damage, and saves many a later headache and loss of plants. As much as I would sometimes prefer to stay inside in the warm and dry of the house, I have many times been repaid for the trip by discovering the start of what could turn into a calamity.

That is why I say the home gardener can obtain some of the most important information he will ever need for success with his plants when the awful, terrible, miserable, messy, horrible, hateful, rains start in the fall, information no one else in the world could supply.

WORK FOR WEEK

Planting of hedge material, climbing plants such as clematis, honeysuckle and Boston Ivy, can still be done if soil is in suitable condition for preparation — not too wet.

If planting is done near foundation of house, a wall or other structure which shields root area from rain in winter, don't neglect checking of soil frequently to see if moisture is needed at roots.

Again check flat growing plants for leaves fallen on top; remove from heathers, junipers, gentians, dianthuses, and other plants which retain green leaves all winter. Leaves from trees rotting on these plants will likely cause brown patches at least, or may kill the entire plant.

UNEASY JUXTAPOSITION of residential areas and industry in Victoria West creates a number of problems, not the least being heavy truck traffic. But City Hall has recently enforced its truck bylaw more seriously, with signs banning the behemoths from streets like Wilson (above) and Pine. Let's give vehicle on left benefit of the doubt, by assuming it's under the 50,000-pound limit. (John McKay photo.)

Rhodesia Plague Flaring

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (CP) — Plague is endemic in Rhodesia.

Since the first recorded outbreak a year ago at Wankie, in the country's western area, there have been 400 suspected cases. Of these, 67 have been confirmed and 13 victims have died.

Dr. A. O. Pugh, provincial medical officer of health for Matabeleland, gave the figures recently at the annual conference of the Rhodesian Association of Public Health Inspectors.

"We have plague now in Rhodesia in our rodent population and it is here for keeps," Dr. Pugh said. "We will always have plague.

"There is no reason why someone who has been bitten by an infected flea can't get on a bus and travel to any part of Rhodesia and start his own little epidemic in his own family."

Plague often occurs two years in succession, then there is a break of a few years before it returns.

"So we can expect more plague this year," he said. In the area where a recent plague death occurred, Pugh said the houses now were "ankle deep" in DDT powder.

"We must accept that we are going to have human outbreaks from time to time. We must remember this and we must educate the public and our staffs, and we must reinstitute rodent control."

He said rodent control had been allowed to slip.

"I believe we will have to be much tighter on it in all parts of Rhodesia."

Asked about the possibility of plague spreading through public transport, Pugh said: "The railway lines run right down through the plague area and right into Bulawayo's railway station, which is a real rodent burrow."

But he said this had been a cause for concern already and all sidings and buildings had been sprayed. "I think the railway line is pretty safe, but I'm still worried about the trucks going up and down, bringing the odd rodent in," as well as the transport vehicles and African buses. Anyone could bring in rodents, fleas and patients."

Although only 13 plague deaths have been reported, Pugh said he was sure there had been many more that had not been reported.

"The sooner we get birth and death registration among Africans in Rhodesia the better, because we haven't a clue what is going on," he said. An early sign of plague is a heavy rodent die-off and there was a severe rate of rodent deaths before the plague broke out at Wankie last September.

There are three main types of plague — bubonic, septicemic and pneumonic. The latter can be transmitted by coughing — this was the "black death" that swept Europe in the Middle Ages.

One problem of rodent control in the area is that the majority of the indigenous population and some foreign laborers in Matabeleland regard the common rodent as a great delicacy.

Picket Protests Lemon

DALLAS (AP) — Candy Ermels has spent most afternoons for the last three weeks picketing the local Cheyrolet dealership that sold her a 1975 Monza.

The 37-year-old divorced mother of two said she decided to picket after her 35th trip to the dealer for repair work.

She said she has had problems with the cooling system warning light, speedometer, exhaust fumes, the air conditioner, the radio, the brakes, the electrical system and the bumpers.

"I don't claim every car built by General Motors is a lemon, but the one they sold me is," Mrs. Ermels said. "They should just admit it and take the car back."

Mrs. Ermel said she is not about to quit her picketing.

"I've already filed a lawsuit against them, and I'm not going to compromise my case by going over to see them now. Besides, if they could't fix the car in 35 trips, they can't do it now."

$31 Million Drug Swoop

MEXICO CITY (Reuter) — Mexican police and army troops have seized narcotics unofficially valued at more than $31 million on the U.S. market.

The attorney-general's office, which directs the country's anti-narcotics campaign, said the drugs were found in 14 recent raids but it did not give precise dates.

A total of 28 pounds of pure heroin was seized in eight raids on or near the U.S. border, together with more than two pounds of cocaine, the office said.

In the western state of Michoacan, 150 miles from here, 25 tons of marijuana were seized in the other raids and more than nine acres of marijuana fields were burned.

All Eyes On Poles

WARSAW (WP) — Specialists in East European affairs are watching two developments in Poland these days with particular interest.

One is the lengthening lines at local shops, especially meat markets, which reflect some potentially volatile political problems for Communist leaders here.

The other is Warsaw's steadily improving relations with Communist East Germany a development that some observers believe carries at least the hint of becoming a so-called "insurance policy" for Poland against too much Soviet involement in Polish domestic affairs.

At the moment, these two observations are not necessarily related. But they could become so if, for example, Poland's worsening economic situtation caused civil unrest, posing a problem and embarrassment for the Kremlin as well and creating a situation where Poland was looking for friends to help persuade the Russians to keep their hands off matters here.

The immediate problems for Poland's Communist leaders, however, are the lines at the meat markets, poor grain harvest, the approach of winter and the virtual certainty that the government will soon have to raise prices for a wide range of consumer goods and reduce the rate at which salaries have been rising.

Five years ago, a somewhat similar combination of circumstances touched off strikes and riots in cities along Poland's Baltic east coast that troubled the regime of Wladyslan Gomulka.

By all accounts, things have improved greatly for the average Polish workers since those December 1970 uprisings. And the new Communist leader since then, Edward Giere has great deal more popular support than his predecessor.

Nevertheless, both East and West European diplomats acknowledge that there is an uneasiness among the public and the workers here, in part becuase no one as yet knows the precise extent of the government's plan to raise more money.

Few observers are predicting a repeat of the 1970 riots, but many specialists say the situation certainly could become volatile.

Poland, like many other East European countries, is now beginning to feel the effect of the recession in the West. This country is now the tenth most industrialized in the world and much of that industrialization has been impotted from the West, especially West Germany, which is now Poland's second-largest trading partner behind Russia.

But Poland has wrung up very large trade deficits as a result and now, due to the West's recession, is having trouble finding markets for its exports to help pay for its imported industrial base.

By the same token, the Poles, like other East European Communist countries, are also being squeezed by higher charges on oil imported from Russia.

When Gierek came to power in 1970, he did so on a pledge that the needs of consumers and a higher standard of living would take priority over sheer economic growth, recognizing that unless the independent-minded Polish workers were reasonably happy there would not be much politcial stability.

One result, is that Polish-produced consumer goods and farm commodities have been heavily subsidized here for several years now, keeping prices down. Gieren's problem now is to get out of this deepening economic hole by inflating prices, but gently enough to prevent a repeat of the 1970 unrest.

New University Scheme Rapped

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Douglas Kenny, University of British Columbia president, expressed concern Friday about the "educational and fiscal implications" of starting a fourth university in the province.

Education Minister Eileen Dailly had announced Thursday that Notre Dame University at Nelson would be the first campus of a new interior university.

Dr. Kenny said he hoped that the new university would "offer programs that are of high quality . . . and I trust that the costs involved . . . will not detract from adequate financing of the existing universities."

Tough Line Answer for New Country

BISSAU, Guinea-Bissau (Reuter) — This tiny west African republic is starting its second year as an independent nation beset by economic problems which it is trying to solve through tough policies.

In September, 1974, the government of President Luis Cabral took over from Portugal a country which was suffering from lo wproduction, a balance-of-trade deficit and a war economy—caused by fighting between Portugal and Cabral's guerrillas.

It has nationalized all land, taken a monopoly hold on all imports of basic foodstuffs and is expected to control exports soon.

Two companies from the country's colonial past, Govea and Ultramarine, have been told the government wants their co-operation.

Govea, which has controlled the peanut and rice trade and coastal shipping, may become a mixed enterprise aimed at expanding industry.

As part of of its tough policy, advances of credits to workers have been abolished because they allow people "to live a fictitious and artificial life," according to Commerce Minister Armando Ramos.

The government tried to ban the distilling of cana (rice alcohol), but postponed the measure because of popular disapproval.

But it has ordered all bars and night clubs here to close at 11 p.m., partly in a campaign against drugs and "unhealthy amusement."

Government officials particularly are concerned about the drug traffic. "We will go so far as to shoot people guilty of this crime in a public square," one said recently. "We will be criticized, but we must finish with it."

One of the government's biggest problems, according to President Cabral, is to unite the formerly Portuguese colonial world of Bissau with the countryside which was under guerrilla control for years.

"It is a job to integrate the people of the zones formerly occupied by the Portuguese," Cabral told Reuter.

High unemployment is another headache, partly caused by the departure of about 40,000 Portuguese soldiers and their families, who provided work and trade for thousands here.

The situation has been aggravated by the country's economic weakness. A few months ago, 2,000 people were working at the main port of Pidjiguiti but now only 400 are needed there.

Education is also weak, with only 80,000 children in school and 70,000 of them in primary school. The government is hoping to enlist foreign assistance and to use formerly Portuguese military encampments as school buildings.

Gritting Their Teeth . . .

Liberals in Oak Bay will take a second run next Tuesday night at selecting a candidate in next month's provincial election.

A nomination meeting Friday night produced an audience of about 40 — but no candidates.

Mrs. Lee Jameson, president of the party's association in the riding, said today that there are two potential candidates but both wanted the weekend to consult with family and business colleagues before letting their names stand.

One of the candidates is Michael O'Connor, a lawyer. Mrs. Jameson and other party members declined to identify the second possibility.

Another nomination meeting will be held Tuesday, at a location to be announced.

Meanwhile, Progressive Conservative supporters in the two-seat riding of Victoria will select their candidates from a choice of at least three at a meeting tonight.

Contenders are Peter Stanley, 28, a BA graduate working at the University of Victoria towards his bachelor of education degree; Lloyd Burdon, 24, and insurance and pension consultant, and Douglas Christie, a lawyer.

The nomination meeting will be at 8 p.m. in the Georgian Room of The Empress.

CUPW Will Sort Christmas Cheques

Striking postal workers in Western Canada, and probably all across the country, have agreed to sort all federal government pension and benefit cheques so they can be delivered before Christmas, a union spokesman said today.

Victoria Canadian Union of Postal Workers president Stan Darlington said union members have agreed to sort the thousands of benefit cheques at some place other than the post office and they will be delivered to homes by letter carriers.

"We will do the sorting at some neutral place, not the post office so our members won't have to cross our own picket line," he said.

The union is willing to meet with Victoria postmaster Martin Glover to work out a system for the sorting.

More

Darlington was unsure whether the same situation would prevail across the country but said it applies at least from Winnipeg west.

There was some dispute as to whether the cheques would be handled by members of the Letter Carriers Union of Canada if they had not been sorted by CUPW members.

A refusal to handle the cheques would have meant the government would revert to a contingency system which included a complicated and time-consuming system of distributing benefits through federal offices in each district.

The cheques include old age security, Canada Pension Plan, judges' pensions, MP pensions, RCMP pensions, armed forces pensions, public service superannuation, veterans allowances and family allowances.

CUPW, for the first time in its history, has established a national strike fund and the first payment to the 22,000 striking members will be made Friday.

Darlington said he did not know exactly how much the payments would be, but said they will be made weekly to all members who are carrying out the duties assigned to them during the strike.

National CUPW president Joe Davidson said the payments, apparently from a massive loan from an undisclosed source, will be made until a settlement is negotiated.

At a membership meeting in Victoria earlier this week, Darlington said members voted to send a telegram to the union's national negotiating committee "indicating a course of action which might resolve the strike."

He would not indicate what the suggested action was.

A Slice Of the Pizza?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Insurance Corporation of British Columbia officials said Friday they are investigating a charge that a Burnaby ICBC adjuster suggested a donation of 10 pizzas would speed service to a pizza parlor owner.

Spokesman Jerry Beckerman said a preliminary check indicated the suggestion for the pizzas started as a joke "but the joke got out of hand."

Doug Price, owner of the pizza parlor which had a delivery car damaged in an accident Tuesday said the suggestion was not made in jest.

He said an employee was unsuccessful on Wednesday in getting the proper accident report forms filled out. He succeeded on Thursday but was told the appraisal would take some time.

Price said he phoned an adjuster and was told the appraisal would have to wait "at least to the end of the week."

"But he said there was a bright side of the problem," Price said. "He said there was a staff party and they could put my car through right away if the party were supplied with 10 pizzas."

No pizzas were sent but the car was appraised Thursday and was awaiting repairs in a body shop on Friday.

GREETINGS from a downcast Santa are portrayed on this larger-than-life protest Christmas card stationed in front of the Davidson House of Cards on View, while shop owner Don Davidson adds his name. When the card is filled with names it will be shipped express to Prime Minister Trudeau with the Yule-tide message: We urge you to settle the current postal dispute, by legislation if necessary. The strike is now in its 26th day.

New Storm Hits Northern Island

A new Pacific storm thundered over northern Vancouver Island Friday night and today, dropping more rain on the flood-ravaged area, whipped by winds of up to 50 miles an hour.

But residents of Port Alice, hardest hit of the north island communities, who were evacuated from their homes earlier this week are moving back today despite the new storm, a Rescue Co-ordination Centre spokesman in Victoria said today.

The flooding appears to have subsided and the 1,100 Port Alice residents who were evacuated to nearby Port Hardy are being moved back by barge and water taxi to face the damage caused by massive mudslides and floods.

A rescue boat from Victoria was in the Port Alice area at 7:30 a.m. today to co-ordinate the return home.

Many of the evacuees have no electricity in their homes, after the wooden support of a main hydro transmission line collapsed Thursday night.

A B.C. Hydro spokesman said crews activated a gas turbine generator at the Keogh generating station 15 miles south of Port Hardy and power was restored to most of the north island area which suffered through a 16-hour blackout.

But it will take one or two days before repairs are made to the main line and before power is restored to all sections, he said.

Kelsey Bay, which has also been affected by the floodwaters, was not affected by the power failure.

A Canadian Forces helicopter has rescued 95 people, eight dogs and three cats from the flooded Sayward Valley and moved them into a MacMillan Bloedel bunkhouse in Kelsey Bay.

Bob Goldie, who piloted the rescue helicopter, said residents were running motorboats down flooded roads in the Sayward Valley, taking people to a field where the helicopter could land to pick them up.

Another armed forces helicopter made sweeps over the isolated logging areas north of Kelsey Bay searching for loggers or hunters who may have been stranded by the floods, but a spokesman said none were found.

Mobile kitchens have been set up to feed the evacuees and food supplies are holding out.

Kelsey Bay is cut off from the rest of the island because of a bridge washout on the Campbell River-Kelsey Bay highway, but the bridge is expected to be repaired later today.

Even after the mess from the mudslides and water has been cleaned up, many of the northern residents will probably be out of work until the new year because of extensive rain and mud damage to logging operations.

Loggers were not called in Thursday or Friday to any of the Crown Zellerbach logging operations in the Courtenay district and it is not known when operations will resume.

The Rayonier pulp mill in Port Alice, the town's economic base, is still closed. The company has issued $200

U.S. Cuts Olympic Security

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A U.S. project to help safeguard next year's olympics at Montreal from a Munich-type terrorist tragedy may go down the drain because of the Ford budget squeeze, sources said today.

A $23 million appropriation request by the Customs Bureau to set up an electronic security system for the Games July 17-Aug. 1 has been slashed back to $2.7 million by the office of management and budget, sources said.

The project was the creation of a special Olympics task force within the Bureau to prevent a repetition of the terrorist disruption of the Munich games which resulted in the slaying of 11 members of the Israeli team.

It recommended $23 million to erect a 450-mile long electronic security screen on the sparsely manned Canadian-U.S. border aimed at detecting any surreptitious crossings of terrorist bands headed for Montreal.

Some of the funds also were earmarked for helping U.S. Customs and Immigration officials expedite trafffic of an estimated 50,000 legitimate border-crossers on the way to Montreal.

Security officials now fear another terrorist episode may mar the games.

"There has been quite an increase in world terrorism since Munich," one official said. "Even in the past two weeks, we have had a series of bombings in Washington and New York and there was a scare during Emperor Hirohito's recent visit that would-be assassins had entered the United States from Canada to kill him."

Voters Braving Weather

The early voting was heavy in Victoria, Saanich and Esquimalt today despite heavy showers and cold winds.

The early turnout was lighter in Oak Bay where only school board posts are being filled.

At St. Luke's Hall in Saanich more than 100 people had voted in the first hour and another 20 were waiting to mark their ballots.

The voting process was slow in Saanich because of the 10 ballots and some were taking as much as five minutes to study and mark their choices.

The foot-long ballot is about eight inches wide and 10 ballots thick. They fold neatly into the ballot boxes.

Major reason for the brisk turnout is believed to be the races for mayor in Saanich, Victoria and Esquimalt. In Oak Bay, Brian Smith was re-elected by acclamation.

The Liquor Administration Branch, in a surprise ruling, has said the Snug lounge can serve liquor today because there is no election for council, just school board, in the municipality.

Hotel officials made a routine inquiry Friday morning and were told by the branch the Snug must be closed, like other liquor outlets in the core municipalities, until polls close at 8 p.m. Then on Friday afternoon, LAB contacted the hotel and said the ruling had been changed and the Snug could remain open.

All government liquor stores in municipalities were closed all day today. Most beer parlors, lounges and cafes with licences plan to begin serving alcoholic beverages at 8 p.m.

Soviet Tanks for Angola

Times News Services

KAMPALA—More than 400 Soviet fighter pilots and technicians have landed in the Angola capital of Luanda and about 200 Soviet T54 tanks are coming in by sea, according to intelligence reports leaving the country.

The Soviet forces are to fight for the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola (MPLA).

However, in Luanda today, there was no report of any Soviet troops. But informed sources said the rival liberation movements—the National Front for the Liberation of Angola (FNLA) and the Union for the Total Independence of Angola (UNITA)—are being aided by white-led troops made up of right-wing Portuguese and South Africans.

President Idi Amin of Uganda, chairman of the Organization of African Unity, has called an emergency meeting of the OAU defence commission to discuss the Angolan situation, the spokesman said in a statement.

The statement said Amin is following seriously the involvment of some foreign countries in African affairs, notably that of the Soviet Union.

Ottawa, Plus Baby or Layoff, Equals Debt Crunch

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Legislative Reporter

Consumer debt is a growing problem in B.C. and provincial debtor assistance officials are concerned the federal anti-inflation program may make matters worse.

"One of the troubling features of the program is that people borrow on their future income and they're generally planning on their income continuing to go up," said deputy consumer services minister Bill Neilson.

The debtor assistance division is trying to monitor the effects of wage and price controls, said Neilson, in the same way it is gathering statistics on the entire debt picture in the province.

Federal authorities, who have gathered information over a long period of time, calculate consumer credit in Canada increased about 18 per cent last year alone.

It is too early for the provincial government to come up with those kind of figures for British Columbia, said Neilson, although over 7,500 people have been counselled by the division since its inception a year ago.

By late spring, the division was helping about 140 people pay back over $1.4 million in debts.

Most people who come fro counselling are young and married and their total debts average between $7,000 and $9,000.

Division officials estimte about 80 per cent of their clients are in their 20s, about 10 per cent in their 30s, six per cent in their 40s and four per cent between 50 and 60 years of age.

A change in circumstances is the key to why people get into debt trouble, say the counsellors and that's why wage and price controls could cause problems for people counting on high salary increases.

Strikes are a major cause of debt problems in B.C. and this has been especially noticeable this summer on Vancouver Island.

Economic slumps with accompanying layoffs, changes in marital status, the arrival of children in marriages where both partners previously worked and other changes in financial circumsntaces are common causes of debt troubles.

There seems to be a "troubling trend" towards unemployment in young people, said Neilson, and this, combined with the tendency of young, married people to want to "buy everything all at once," makes them most susceptable to debt problems.

The blame for overindebtedness can probably be placed in three categories, said Neilson: reckless consumers, reckless creditors and real hardship.

The cases of real hardship are beyond the scope of the division, in the sense of being able to cure the problem, but the counsellors can help individuals with their specific debt troubles.

Both Frank Steggles, counsellor for the Vancouver Island region, and Edward Sibbald, working in Greater Victoria, say people genuinely want to pay back their debts.

There are several avenues of assistance the counsellors use, including simply advising people how best ot make their own arrangements for paying back creditors.

Counsellors talk to creditors involved and often get them to agree to modify terms of loans or interest rates. Money is then collected monthly for the client by the division which then pays creditors on a pro-rated basis. Sometimes a creditor will agree to a straight settlement of the loan.

Under a federal program through the Bankruptcy Act, the division seeks a court order to reduce interest rates to five per cent and extend the time of repayment.

In hopeless cases, the person is referred to federal officials to go through bankruptcy procedures.

But Neilson said there is still a general aversion to the

Macdonald Bungled, Deficit Only $8B

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said Friday he made a mistake earlier this week when he estimated a federal budget deficit of between $5 billion and $6 billion in the fiscal year ending March 31.

Macdonald said he misunderstood a question in the Commons Thursday from Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, who asked about the expected deficit.

"I thought I was being asked about government cash requirements when he asked me that question," Macdonald said Friday.

He said he stands by the estimate of a $3.12-billion budget deficit forecast for this year in the June 23 budget. This compares with a $1.50-billion deficit on budget transactions in fiscal 1974-75.

Treasury Board President Jean Chretien, asked about Macdonald's estimate, said outside the Commons: "He made a slip."

He said the government will have cash needs this year of between $5 billion and $6 billion, but this is different from the deficit.

"We have to borrow money to lend" to government agencies and departments for advances and loans, Chretien said.

"But that's not the same thing as the deficit at all."

Chretien added that he spoke with Macdonald Friday and "straightened him out."

Meanwhile, opposition parties continued to attack the government's anti-inflation program. Stanfield asked in the Commons whether Quebec, which is setting up its own prices and incomes commission, has agreed to follow the federal guides on wages and prices.

Macdonald said he "had assurance from Quebec that they will be closely parallelling the federal program." But he said he couldn't guarantee the province's program would be applied exactly the same as the federal plan.

So far, Ontario and Alberta have agreed to follow the federal selective wage and price controls imposed Oct. 14.

Macdonald said he can not be sure the remaining provinces will announce their decisions about the program before legislation to put the plan into operation comes back to the Commons for third reading in about a week.

As the Commons started a special one-day debate on the anti-inflation program, New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent said his party "cannot under any circumstances support the program."

The debate was on an NDP motion that condemns the controls because, it says, they apply unfairly against wage and salary earners but will not control prices and professional incomes.

The NDP motion expressing non-confidence in the government is expected to be easily defeated. A formal vote will be held Monday night.

Stanfield said the Progressive Conservatives will not support the NDP motion because it is "premature and clearly destructive in purpose."

House standings: Liberals 140, Conservatives 95, NDP 16, Social Credit 11. There is one independent and one vacancy.

Broadbent said if the government wants to control inflation it must take on the multinational oil companies, the banks, trust companies and the large food chains.

He said the Bank Act, which is coming up for its regular 10-year revision, should be changed to require financial institutions to invest in low-cost housing.

The government should also change its policy of permitting Canadian oil prices to rise to international levels.

"It is absurd and unfair to charge Canadians world prices for their own natural resources," he said.

Ontario gasoline prices rise 5.4 cents after a provincial price freeze expires today. The freeze was imposed in July after a federal decision allowed crude oil price to rise by $1.50 a barrel to $8 on July 1.

Stanfield attacked the federal program mainly because it will last too long. The anti-inflation bill would apply until the end of 1978, but can be extended.

"This makes it practically an indefinite program in a majority government situation," Stanfield said. It would be a very different thing" if people were being asked to accept controls for one or two years.

Too much concentration of decision-making power in Ottawa would result from the proposed three-year program.

110 Firms Answer Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — Jean-Luc Pepin, anti inflation board chairman, said Friday 110 of the 178 comvanies requested to provide the board with detailed information on prices and profits within one week responded on time.

A board spokesman said Nov. 7, when the request was made, that there is no question of fining those firms which do not reply on time. But he said the board would "keep after" companies that are late.

The companies included major banks, food distributors, large oil companies and other manufacturers.

Because of the postal strike, the requests were sent by telegram and courier. Pepin said 46 of the companies responding did so in writing while 64 contacted the board by telephone. Some of those telephoning did not have full information immediately available and were told to provide it in writing next week.

Annuity Rate Hike Proposed

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has introduced a bill in the Commons to increase the rate of return on federal annuities to seven per cent. Current rates are between three per cent and 5½ per cent.

The bill, given first reading Friday, also would discontinue the sale of new annuity contracts.

The proposals were promised in the June 23 budget. Then finance minister John Turner said inflation and high interest rates made government annuity plans non-competitive with more flexible plans sold by private industry.

About 270,000 Canadians own federal annuities. An annuity is an investment that is returned in regular payments.

The seven per cent rate on existing annuities will be retroactive to April 1, 1975, the bill says.

Turner said in June the sale of new plans would be discontinued because of poor sales.

Metal Stamps On Sale

MONTREAL (CP) — Postmaster-general Bryce Mackasey launched a new program to finance the 1976 Summer Olumpic Games through the post office Friday with the marketing of metal replicas of official Olympic stamps.

However, he said revenues could be affected by the current postal strike "if it's not settled soon."

Mackasey said of the expected $50 million generated from royalties on the gold, silver and bronze reproductins, revenue for the post office will be $10 million.

This would be turned over to the Olympic organizing committee.

The commemorative stamp collection also includes a 23k-gold foil official Olympic postal stamp.

Cost of t he replicas, to be mounted in acrylic and sold world-wide, range from $20 for a set of three bronze stamps to $750 for three gold stamps, an official said.

Diplomatic Action Asked From Ottawa Against PLO

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—The Canadian government should declare in the "clearest possible terms" its abhorrence of terrorism by the Palestine Liberation Organization, Claude Wagner (PC—Saint Hyacinthe) told the commons Friday.

He said the PLO was claiming responsibility for the terrible bomb explosion in Zion Square is Jerusalem Thursday. That explosion killed seven persons and wounded 34.

It commemorated the first anniversary of the PLO leader Jasser Arafat's visit to the United Nations when he waved the olive branch.

"Will the acting prime minister tell this house what instruction if any were given to our ambassador at the UN that Canada's abhorrence of terrorism by the PLO be clearly demonstrated." Wagner asked Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp.

He pointed out that the PLO was about to be invited by the Canadian government to participate in the UN conference on Human Settlements to be held next year in Vancouver.

Sharp said Canada's attitude toward terrorist activities is well known.

"We deplore them and we have protested in most vigorous terms," said Sharp.

He doubted it would be appropriate to make another protest at this particular time. However he promised to consider the suggestion.

The UN conference in Vancouver will be attended by representatives of observer bodies such as the PLO providing they are not terrorists, he added.

Wagner noted that the Ottawa Voice of Women group has arranged for a public forum Monday at the Ottawa Public Library. The subject under discussion will be "How Zionism is a form of racism."

Invited to participate is Shafik Al-Hout, director of the PLO delegation office in Beirut, Lebanon, vice chairman of the PLO delegation at the UN.

"Will the minister indicate what steps will be taken by the government to prevent the entry into Canada for such purposes of this leader of the terrorist organization. This would acknowledge that parliament's condemnation of the UN resolution is not just a matter of words," asked Wagner.

Immigration Minister Robert Andras said the government's policy has been clearly stated that no terrorist will be allowed to enter Canada.

PRICES: Everyday Things Dearer in Canada, But That Doesn't Keep Americans Away

(Last of three)

PORT ANGELES — Not too many months ago when the sun was warm, we ventured this side of the border and wham — I ran into an irate shopper.

We had pulled off the freeway and gone into Eugene, Oregon, and there I was harmlessly plucking groceries from my cart and placing them on the supermarket checkout counter when a voice came from nowhere.

"Is that your van outside, are you from Canada?" the voice asked without taking a breath.

I traced the voice to a large man standing behind me in the line but I still wasn't sure just what I was guilty of.

Not knowing which question to answer first, I glanced uneasily out of the window. Well, the van was still there and it looked as though it was still in one piece. Can't be that.

"Yes," I said sort of vaguely trying to answer both questions at once.

Then he pounced.

"Well, I've just come back from a holiday up in B.C. and is it ever bloody expensive!" he said in an accusing way.

★

"Yes, I guess it is," I said as pleasantly as I could. But it wasn't much help.

"Everywhere we went," the large young man stormed on, "... prices you wouldn't believe."

As I left, carrying the responsibility for the whole Canadian economy on my shoulders, he was still venting his anger on a young checkout girl who hadn't been to Canada and hadn't the faintest idea of what he was on about.

But you know, he's right.

A two-day trip to this little timber-rich city just across the Juan de Fuca Strait from Victoria has shown me just how costly things are in B.C. compared with the United States.

The big things — land, homes, cars, appliances — are much cheaper here. A family home on a good-sized lot could be only half the price of a similar home in B.C. But it's the everyday things that seem to hit the pocket more in Canada.

In Victoria, the cheapest gas I was able to find was selling at 73.8 cents a gallon. I know the U.S. gallon is a little smaller, but I filled my car up here at 55.9 a gallon.

Parking in downtown Victoria costs five cents for 15 minutes, 10 cents for 30 minutes and 25 cents for an hour. Over here it's a penny for 12 minutes, a nickel for an hour and a dime for two hours — right on the main street.

In the hamburger joints, everything on the menu seems to be a few cents less than in Canada. And, as colleague Arthur Mayse pointed out in a recent column, you get about twice as much to eat down here.

One thing that takes a bit of getting used to here is having to pay a five per cent tax on everything.

A 25-cent cup of coffee is "25 cents please, with the tax."

As the owner of the motel I stayed in quipped:

Peg Buck, wife of radio station KONP owner George Buck, told me she loves to visit Victoria to shop because of the much wider selection. But she no longer has many illusions about the prices.

"There was a time when things like china were a little cheaper in Victoria," she said. "But they're not nowadays."

Mrs. Buck said she bought a dress in I. Magnin's, Seattle's most expensive store. While in Victoria recently she saw the same dress in a shop there. It was $6 dearer in Victoria.

She thought she noticed, also while in Victoria, that grocery prices "were about the same" as here in Port Angeles. But she admitted she didn't look too closely. And I certainly didn't find them about the same.

The day I left Vancouver Island I popped into the Safeway store at Fort and Foul Bay and jotted down a few random prices. Over here, every one of those items is not nearly so painful to buy.

A 32-ounce bottle of Mazola corn oil was $1.65 in Victoria and $1.53 in Safeway here. A three-pound box of Tide washing powder costs $1.29 here while in Victoria a two-pound, 10-ounce box was $1.49. A box of Kleenex tissues containing 200 sheets was 67 cents in Canada and only 39 here.

On the meat counter, a leg of lamb was selling for $1.89 a pound and was one of the store specials in Victoria while here it's $1.69 regular. Few can afford T-bone steak any more but for those who can it costs $2.49 a pound here compared with $2.65 in Victoria.

Fruit and vegetables are quite a bit cheaper over here. Mushrooms which cost 99 cents a pound in Victoria are 88 here; all nuts in the shell were 85 cents a pound in Canada and 69 here; one small lettuce in the Victoria Safeway was 39 cents while it's two large ones here for 39 cents.

But all those higher prices north of the border don't appear to have been keeping the Americans away. City manager Ken Whorton told me he understood this year is already a record one for the number of tourists going to Canada via Port Angeles.

And as I lined up now on the dock waiting for the Mv. Coho to take me home, it's still evident that neither higher prices nor the colder weather are keeping them away. With me in the lineup are cars and campers from California, Colorado, Michigan, Oklahoma, Idaho and, of course, Washington.

You know, things might cost more . . . but it will be kind of nice to get back on the Island.

United Way Drive Extended

The United Way campaign, scheduled to close today, has been extended to the end of the month in an attempt to offset the negative effects of the postal strike.

Campaign chairman Eric Dowell said a total of $360,165 has been turned into the United Way office, 48 per cent of this year's objective of $750,000.

The extension will allow all canvassers time to complete and file their returns, Dowell said.

He said a number of groups have shown increases in donations over last year: architect's donations are up 22 per cent; chartered accountants up 21 per cent and doctors up 10 per cent.

Executives of the campaign will meet Monday with deputy Provincial Secretary Lawrie Wallace and representatives of the government employees' fund committee in an attempt to boost lagging donations from that section.

Dowell said he hoped for "some encouraging results from that sector."

Donations to the campaign can be made at any chartered bank in the Greater Victoria area, at any United Way agency or at the appeal office.

GOODWILL employee Bob Murray seems a mite puzzled as to how one should play this one-string fiddle — one of the many items to be auctioned Saturday, Nov. 22, at the Goodwill Rehabilitation Centre, 220 Bay. Preview of the items, ranging from old dolls and furniture to an 1880 edition of Dante's Inferno, begins at 12 noon and the auction will start at 1:30 p.m.

Mind Games at UVic

University of Victoria is offering the public a series of exercises for the mind.

Similar in technique to the age-old fire drill, the navy war games and hospital disaster exercises, the simulation exercises are designed to give people experience in organizational systems.

The games make use of computer feed-outs on topics of land-use planning, water resource management, cross cultural relations, and use of power in organization, and are handled by the game players.

A specialty of the UVic school of public administration, the simulation games are designed to demonstrate learning by experience as opposed to the lecturer-listener method, said Dr. Bart Cunningham of the public administration department.

Each game takes about two or three hours, and although the system is not now widely used for management or administrative training, they have been used to acquaint local officials on how to react to local disasters.

Each participant takes a role in the decision and discussion process, says Cunningham.

A similar games program was offered at the university last year and 40 people from diverse work backgrounds participated, he said.

The department asks that interested people phone the department at 477-6911. Fee for the experience is $3 to include coffee and donuts and wine at the end of the exercise.

Blood Clinic Next Week

Monday's clinic is at Red Cross House, 1046 Fort, from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. and 6:30 to 9 in the evening.

Clinics Tuesday through Thursday are at the University of Victoria's Student Union Building, from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

BRIEF RESPITE

About 600 Saanich school students got a brief respite from class work Friday when a spray glue tin exploded in a storeroom setting off a small fire near the school library.

Fire drill procedures were put into motion about noon at Royal Oak School, said Eric Lewis, superintendent of Saanich school district.

He said although the cause is still being investigated by the Saanich fire department, it is though the can exploded and set off a fire in a closet in the storeroom.

The closet was badly damaged and the store room was damaged by smoke, he said.

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

As if municipal elections were not confusing enough, in the race for regional district it is difficult to know who's on first — even with a program.

Some ballots are a complete waste of time while others could make the loser the winner — or produce no result if all.

The problem stems from the simultaneous election of members to council and regional district. Election to regional district is valid only if the candidate also is elected mayor or alderman at the same time.

He is running against Norman Tapping for mayor. Tapping did not seek the regional district seat. If Young is re-elected mayor he wins both jobs. If tapping is elected mayor, nobody is elected to the regional seat.

In Sidney, city clerk Geoff Logan has lodged a protest with the provincial department of municipal affairs over the regional ballot there.

Only one position is open and the only candidates are three of the four candidates for mayor. Whoever is elected mayor wins the regional post regardless of how many votes he gets on the regional ballot. Unless the fourth candidate, Wilfred Gibson, is elected mayor.

If Gibson wins, there will be nobody elected on the regional ballot, although three people sought the one position.

"That regional ballot is a complete waste of time," Logan said.

"It has no bearing on anything. I'm not even going to bother counting it tonight. I may get around to it on Monday."

In Saanich, six candidates are seeking three seats on the regional ballot. Two have been defeated before the counting starts. In the running are all three candidates for mayor: Ed Lum, Mel Convelier and James Maxwell. The two losers are disqualified from the regional ballot, even if they run first and second.

The person elected mayor stands a good chance of making it on the regional ballot, although it is possible he could be fourth and out.

The other three candidates are running for alderman: Fred Severson, Sandy Noel and Joe Bourque.

If all three are re-elected to council, the regional ballot has meaning because it would be a four-way race for three positions among the mayor and three aldermen.

If only two of the alderman are elected, the regional seats go by acclamation to the two alderman and the elected mayor.

The combinations are endless. There will be a least one of the three seats filled (by the mayor) and possibly all three (three alderman or mayor and two aldermen).

Victoria stands a good chance of filling the single position vacant as its representative to the regional district.

The sole survivor has to include only one of mayoralty candidates Mike Young, William Hollick or Joe Richards or aldermanic candidates Ann Tarasoff or Kay Woods.

If none of them make it, there is no winner on the regional ballot. If one makes it, the regional post is by acclamation. If more than one are elected to council, then the regional ballot becomes important.

The most vivid example of the weird possibilities occurred in Saanich in 1973.

With two seats to be decided, the voting on the regional ballot was:

Edith Gunning	6,465
Frank Waring	5,128
Sandy Noel	4,120
Fred Severson	3,934

The two elected were Noel and Severson, who also were elected aldermen. Gunning and Waring ran against Ed Lum for mayor and lost so they were both disqualified on the regional ballot although they ran one-two. Lum did not seek the regional seat.

The long-term solution, says regional board executive director Dennis Young, is to have people elected to the regional board regardless of whether they are on council as well. This, however, is probably at least five years down the road and the confusion will continue until then.

In the meantime, the regional district will continue to invoke section 129-1A of the municipal act that calls for appointment of board members from municipal council members in cases where an election fails to fill a regional board position.

Ironically, this was the system used before the provincial government began insisting upon elections for regional district posts in organized territories.

In other words, where the new system doesn't work they use the old system — until they find a better system.

Ask The Times

Q. Can you please tell me the origin of the term "O.K." and in which country it originated? M.R.

A. After a search through numerous dictionaries, including those specifically dealing with slang terms, the precise answer to your question still eludes us. But most experts seem to agree the expression originated in the U.S., and a commonly-held theory is that it was first used in the American presidential campaign of 1840 as an abbreviation of "Old Kinderhook," the nickname and birthplace (near Albany, N.Y.) of Democratic candidate Martin Van Buren. It gradually became accepted as a term of approval, standing for all correct.

Mathews' A Dictionary of Americanisms says one source claims the initials were first used by General Jackson: "Those papers, Amos, are all correct. I marked them O.K." (oll k'rect). As the dictionary drily notes: "The Gen. was never good at spelling."

Q. What is actor Donald Sutherland's address? S.M.

A. Write: Donald Sutherland, c/o CMA 9255, Sunset Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.

Mobile Unit Life-Saver

A sophisticated diagnostic machine which Royal Jubilee Hospital put on the road earlier this year has probably saved some lives among up-island patients.

The machine is a $20,000 gamma camera which can produce pictures of a patient's brain, liver, spleen, lungs, bones or placenta by tracing the progress of minute quantities of radioactive material injected into the bloodstream.

Such machines are not unusual in big hospitals but smaller hospitals can't afford them. So last April Jubilee launched a pilot project which has one of their machines taken by van to hospitals in Nanaimo, Chemainus, Duncan and Resthaven Hospital at Sidney one day a week.

In a report on the first six months of the mobile scanning service, Dr. A. G. Richards, head of Jubillee's department of nuclear medicine, said 34 per cent of the 187 scans done on up-island patients revealed abnormalities, including a ruptured spleen, brain tumor and pulmonary embolism.

"Establishing an earlier diagnosis through this service may very well have been life-saving in some cases," said Dr. A. C. Pickles, executive director at Jubilee.

Richards reported that the high incidence of abormal scans is evidence the mobile service is not being over-used and may in fact be not used enough.

"It is likely that requests for scanning will increase as physicians come to appreciate the utility of scanning in solving diagnostic problems," he said.

Fish Boat Crew Brought to City

A British tanker was expected in Victoria later today with 34 survivors from a Korean fishing boat which burned and was abandoned off the Oregon coast Friday.

Two men died in the mishap and three of the survivors are suffering from burns, with two of them described as severely injured. The U.S. Coast Guard was considering airlifting the injured men off the tanker, by helicopter if weather in the vicinity of Cape Flattery permitted.

Explosions in the engine room of the Kwang Myong 96 touched off the fire about 4 a.m. Friday when the fishboat was about 320 miles southwest of the cape.

While Canadian and American ships were diverted to the scene, the men were picked up by the tanker Anco Templer. Weather conditions were described as "appalling," with winds to 60 knots.

Plans to transfer the survivors to the Canadian destroyer Terra Nova had to be abandoned because of rough seas. A move to have a U.S. supply ship Provider transfer the injured men also had to be scrapped because of the weather.

Oak Bay Power Out

Winds gusting to 71 miles an hour blew down a tree across a power line on Cranmore Road at 12:50 a.m. causing a power failure affecting most of Oak Bay.

Oak Bay police and fire departments had to switch to emergency lighting.

Power was restored at 5:30 a.m., B.C. Hydro officials said.

City police also reported two windows were broken in downtown stores.

Racketeers Suspected In Rash of Car Fires

Victoria fire officials are keeping their eyes open for car fire conspiracies after provincial secretary Ernie Hall said an arson ring is increasing its activities here.

"The possibility exists that there might be a racket," deputy fire chief Carl Coates said Thursday.

Both men's comments followed Vancouver fire officials' recent statements that a rash of automobile fires there might be arranged by racketeers paid off by owners who benefit from insurance.

Hall has ordered the Insurance Corporation of B.C. fraud squad to investigate the matter.

Victoria's sixth car fire this month occurred Wednesday in a car parked at McDonald's, 980 Pandora, said Coates.

He said a backfire through the carburetor started the engine blaze, which caused about $100 damage.

This year 94 car fires have occurred in the city, and August was the heaviest month with 12 fires.

"The number of car fires is of some concern to us. We give them very close attention," he said.

He cited a common practice among teenagers as a dangerous one which often leads to fire. Young people sometimes remove car air filters, he said, which can allow hot gasoline to spray over the engine and catch fire.

The department is more concerned, however, about the ones that are deliberately set.
